WELL-KNOWN BROKER AND WIFE IN HARBOUR DIVE

INCH AND HALF OF RAIN IN AN HOUR

The torrential downpour which washed out local sport yesterday produced one and a half inches of rain in one hour. The total rainfall for twelve hours at 10 p.m. registered at the Royal Observatory was 1.97 inches, of which 1.47 inches fell between 4.30 and 5.30 p.m. The typhoon entered the coast in the vicinity of Kwong Chow Wan.

BRITAIN'S HUGE NAVAL EXPANSION

London, Yesterday. The naval correspondent of the "Daily Telegraph" states that British naval tonnage now under construction is almost as large as that of entire British fleet in 1935. Since 1936, Britain started the construction of 5 battleships of 35,000 tons and 2 battlecruisers of 40,000 tons; 5 aircraft-carriers of 23,000 tons;

2 cruisers of 10,000 tons; 9 cruisers of 8,000 tons; 10 cruisers of 5,450 tons; 9 destroyers of 1,850 tons; 25 destroyers of 1,690 tons; 17 submarines and a large number of escort and patrol vessels, minesweepers and anti-submarine craft.

Some 20 older cruisers are being reconstructed and mostly turned into anti-aircraft ships.

COMPLETE RENEWAL

During the same period, of less than three years, the entire equipment of the fleet has been replaced and reserves of fuel, munitions and other appliances have been extraordinarily increased.

The number of the personnel is 110,000 to-day compared with 94,000 in 1935 and will be considerably reinforced next year.—Trans-Ocean.

BARCELONA TWICE BOMBED

Barcelona, Yesterday. This city was bombed twice to-day by the Insurgents, but damage was slight.

With the influx of refugees, Barcelona's population has risen to over two million and the food problem is causing some concern to the authorities.—Reuter.

BRITISH PLAN SENT TO SPAIN

London, Yesterday. The draft of the British plan for the withdrawal of volunteers from Spain, which has now been approved by all members of the Non-Intervention Committee, is being submitted to the Burgos authorities, while the Spanish Government has also been advised.

The complete plan, it is understood, will be published on Monday as a White Paper.—Reuter.

MORE BELT TIGHTENING

Tokyo, Yesterday.

Effective on July 15th, the private use of lead, zinc, antimony, nickel and other metals needed in the manufacture of munitions will be restricted by the Ministry of Commerce and Industry on a wartime policy.

Ministerial decree to that effect is to be issued to-day.

The Ministry also has decided to control the distribution and consumption of rubber, also effective to-day.—Reuter.

CHURCH AID NAZI ARMISTICE

Vienna, Yesterday.

The Nazi Party and the Roman Catholic Church which have been at loggerheads since the Anschluss have arranged a truce.

The Nazis agreed not to prevent members of their Party from attending churches and the Catholic authorities to suppress the activities of priests opposing the Nazi regime.—Reuter.

STORM HAVOC IN WARSAW

Warsaw, Yesterday.

There has been great damage in the last few days in Warsaw by a severe storm which demolished 38 dwellings and 466 farm houses, according to the latest reports.

Twenty-two persons have been killed by lightning.—Trans-Ocean.

MOTOR BOATS ON POYANG LAKE

Hankow, Yesterday.

The Japanese at Hukou are moving southward in motor boats into the Poyang Lake where they apparently intend to flank the Chinese defenders at Kiukiang or threaten Nanchang, the capital of Kiangsi, according to Chinese press dispatches from Kiukiang.—Reuter.

GUERRILLAS ON OUTSKIRTS ON TSINGTAO

TSINGTAO, YESTERDAY. THE CONSTANT THREAT TO THE JAPANESE OR CHINESE GUERRILLAS VIVIDLY ILLUSTRATED YESTERDAY WHEN SEVERE FIGHTING TOOK PLACE BETWEEN GUERRILLAS AND JAPANESE TROOPS AT CHINYANG, WITHIN 20 MILES OF TSINGTAO ON THE KIAOCHOW-TSINAN RAILWAY.

A further clash occurred at Shatsekou, approximately fifteen miles from Tsingtao.

In the course of the Shatsekou clash, between forty and fifty houses were burned down.

Several armoured cars are said to have been rushed from Tsingtao to Shatsekou which was a guerrilla stronghold, before the Japanese gained the upper hand.—Reuter.

MASS RAID ON NANCHANG

Nanchang, Yesterday.

Another mass air attack on Nanchang was made by twenty seven Japanese planes at noon-time

Japanese Threat To Bombard Kiukiang

Shanghai, Yesterday.

Foreshadowing intensive bombardment and bombing of Kiukiang and Kuling, Japanese naval authorities this morning issued a detailed statement to foreign consuls in which they urged the immediate evacuation of all foreign nationals, merchantmen and warships between Hukou and Whangshikang, about midway between Kiukiang and Hankow.

It was announced that Kiukiang and Kuling are now military objectives owing to the presence of Chinese troops.

The statement declared that with the occupation of Hukou by the Japanese, that section of the Yangtze, between Hukou and the districts adjacent thereto, had already become a battlefield.

It was stressed especially that intensive fighting was taking place in the area between Hukou and Whangshikang where the Chinese appear to be busily engaged in laying mines in the river.

FLEET WILL SHELL

"As it is necessary, our fleet will shell and bomb vessels thus engaged as well as ports on the river bank and it is hoped that all naval vessels and other ships belonging to third Powers will leave this danger zone as quickly as possible in order to avoid any casualties."

At present there are a number of British and Americans still in Kuling and Kiukiang, as well as a British and an American gunboat.—Reuter.

SWEET MAKING

NO doubt about it, home-made sweets do taste better and are more wholesome than any other kind. Nor are they so troublesome to make as some people think.

If you've not tried before, Fudge and Coconut Ice are good kinds to make.

For Fudge put 1lb. sugar and one cupful of milk into a saucepan and heat over a low flame. When the sugar has dissolved, bring to the boil, take care the mixture does not boil before the sugar is quite dissolved. If you find the sugar sticking to the sides, you can wash it off with a brush or a piece of greaseproof paper dipped in water. Boil until a little of the mixture dropped into a cup of cold water can be formed into a soft ball with finger and thumb.

Now stir in three piled dessertspoonsful of coco—stewed if it looks lumpy—and beat it well with a wooden spoon until it is nice and creamy. At the last moment beat in about a dessertspoonful of butter. Pour on to a buttered tin.

FOR your Coconut Ice, heat 1lb sugar and one teaspoonful of water in a saucepan over a low flame until the sugar is dissolved. Then bring to the boil, but be very careful that the mixture does not boil before the sugar is quite dissolved.

Test as for the fudge, then stir in 1lb. desiccated coconut, and beat well, adding a knob of butter. Pour half the mixture into a buttered tin; to the rest add half a teaspoonful of rosewater and a drop (not too much) of cochineal, and cover top of the white.

If you want chocolate coconut ice put coco into the second half instead of the cochineal and rose flavouring.

Lace For Troussseau

WITH the return of more shapely clothing, fitting the body snugly, we were threatened with a return of the old whale-boned corset that would lace us to within an inch of our lives. But corset manufacturers are wiser these days and have overcome that problem by evolving a comfortable and even more efficient foundation garment.

We were also promised a return of the frivolous, senseless little lace camisole; but that also was a false alarm. Underwear has never been so lovely. It is tailored, splendidly fitted; yet essentially feminine.

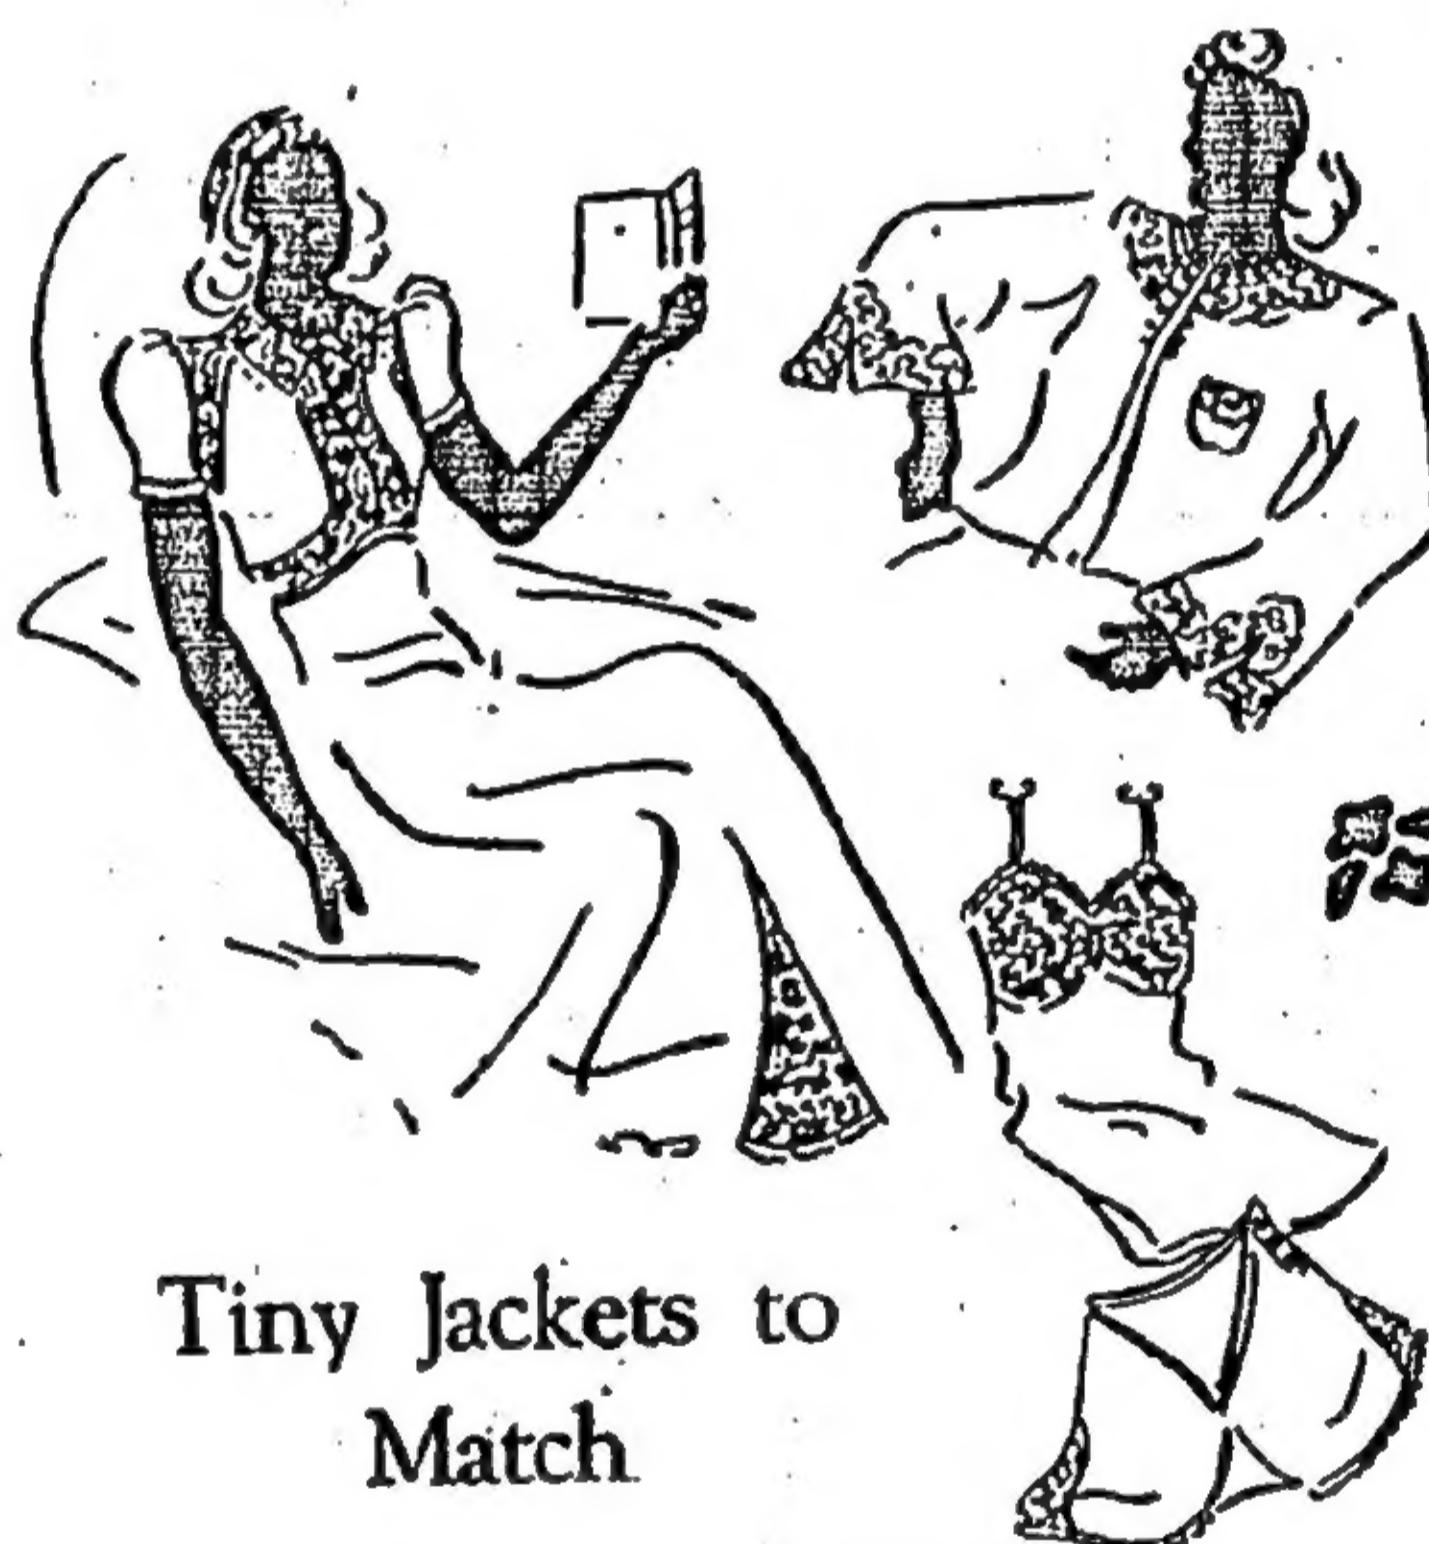

The popularity of the long-neglected fanciful blouse suggested camisoles again, but instead lovely little silk shirts were made, with brassiere tops supplying the delicate touch required for a transparent blouse. Such a garment is sketched here. It has a pair of slim-fitting panties to match it. Unless a frock is very transparent, such a dual outfit makes a petticoat unnecessary, although the most perfect tailored slips are available when a dress demands them.

Nightdresses have never been so delightful as at present. They follow the evening gown fashion of having a jacket to match.

A further concession to the mode of the moment is the bolero, such as you see worn at the top of the page.

The other sketched jacket suggests a mandarin coat, with its high, round neckline, and long, wide sleeves.

The nightdress to which our artist has given a net jacket is something quite new. It is not warmth-giving, but gives a novel and delicate touch to the summer troussseau.

CROWS feet are very often caused by eye-strain, so be careful and see that you do not work under very bad lights or do too much sewing without the aid of glasses.

They can sometimes be remedied by massaging carefully across them with liniment. Be sure that the movement is firm, and carry it out regularly, and gently.

ONE THING & ANOTHER

A FROU-FROU of silk and satin touched a cord somewhere in our memory. Then, as a timid tap sounded on our door, we remembered. It was Miss Fluttering-Sleightley.

We hadn't seen her for months, but we recognized her lavender and lace at once.

"It's about Archibald, again," she started. "You know, my cousin Tabitha's son, the one you gave me such good advice about, back in April, I think it was."

"Anyhow, I know it was raining a lot at the time, and the Vicar's daughter caught a cold through going out without her galoshes. She's a silly girl, that Winnie. She takes after her mother."

"I can't understand how the dear Vicar ever came to marry her—her mother, I mean. She was only a shop assistant, and much too flighty for a clergyman's wife."

"Not that I have anything against shop assistants, but you can't be too careful, especially when you have a position like the Vicar's to keep up, can you?"

"We may be a little dense, Miss Fluttering-Sleightley, but what has this to do with Archibald?" we interposed.

"Archibald?" she queried.

"Oh, yes, of course! How foolish of me!"

"Do you know, the other evening, I saw him walking down the street in broad daylight, at least, it wasn't quite dark, with his arm around a girl's waist!"

"I feel ever so worried, after all I have read in the papers lately. Do you think it was immoral of him? And what mightn't it lead to. You know, all these White Slavers and I don't know what?"

"But Archibald isn't a girl," we pointed out.

Letter From The Monster

DEAR Mr. Whatstait,—

I am very sorry that you have been unable to do anything for me. I had rather hoped that after my appeal to you last week, you would have been able to do something about stopping these people prying into my private life.

It's not that I mind so much myself. It's the wife. She's the best of wives, but the little woman is apt to get just a trifle touchy where the children are concerned, bless her heart.

She says they are too young yet to have any contact with the outside world, and its divorcees dictators, and Communism. "I don't want them to feel locked up, when the chicks are far too young to fly away from the nest," she told me only this morning.

She is particularly anxious about the older girl, Gorgon. It's all these photographers hanging around the Loch. Before we know what has happened, she says, Gorgon will get film-struck, swim over to Hollywood, and go rapidly up the path that leads to the land and the heights of degradation.

Anyway, do you think my daughter would stand much chance as a child actress? She weighs 143 stone, but is quite slim.

As a matter of fact, it's quite round girl's waist!

"My younger daughter, Medusa,

I should be really grateful for any suggestions you would be good enough to make. And, in the meantime, could you do anything about those photographers?

Yours faithfully,
The Loch Ness Monster.

Trouble Corner

LAST night I had a horrible nightmare, in which I was chased by cannibals riding on huge toads. One of them had a pint of beer in his hand, and was yelling, "Two to one, bar one!"

What does this mean?" So writes Sally (Workshop).

Obviously, Sally, you have been dreaming. Try going to bed without supper.

"My young man has not been round to see me for a fortnight. Last night I saw him out with a blonde in the park, the day before he took her to the pictures, and nearly every night he is round at her house. Do you think I need give him up because of this? My friends say I should." — Becky (Giggleswick).

No, Becky. "I am very much in love with a girl, but I am afraid to propose to her, because she might laugh at me. What should I do?" — Willie (Wolverhampton). Don't.

Creep Again

WHEN a local Water Board member met to consider the shortage of water in the district, a member of the Board said that wastage was as well as drought responsible.

"Working people," he said, "should have one bath a fortnight."

An unscrupulous subterfuge, don't you think, Mr. Whatstait?

"Working people," he said, "characteristic of foreigners?"

"No; a very businesslike expedition for the father of a small family of monsters to know what to turn his children to. There seem to be so few jobs going nowadays that are suitable.

All we have to do is to ensure that no spectator is admitted to the ground who has seen England lose, and the Ashes are as good as ours.

TRYSTING PLACE INTRUSION

NEW FRENCH ARMY CORPS

It was about midnight. Sitting close to each other, they were on a rock near the three-and-a-half-mile stone on Taipo Road, Kowloon.

Their little world of happiness was suddenly shattered by the appearance of two rough-looking thugs, armed with daggers.

"Raise your hands!" commanded the ruffian, not satisfied with 50 cents which the youth declared was all he had, while the other went through the young man's pockets and purse, taking altogether $9.60.

The men were just about to relieve the young woman of finger-ring when pedestrians appeared in the vicinity, forcing the foot-pads to make a hasty exit.

The young man and his lady friend, made a report to the police, but the ruffians could not be traced.

FOREIGN SURVEY OF MILITARY POSSIBILITIES

Hankow, Yesterday.

Whereas about one month ago the inhabitants of Hankow were seized with panic in consequence of which a large part of the population fled from the city, calm now reigns here owing to the general belief that no immediate danger is threatened to the Chinese capital.

The conviction prevails that the Japanese are unable to advance along the banks of the Yangtse, and that Hankow cannot be captured as a result of operations confined to the river alone. A few days ago it was considered probable that the Japanese would advance along the bank of Lake Poyang on Nanchang and Changsha and would endeavour, in the neighbourhood of the latter town, to cut the vitally important railway from Hankow to Canton.

Foreign circles here are, however, now of the opinion that the Japanese will, for the time being, not advance beyond Nanchang, fall of which is possible within the near future.

It is pointed out that the way in a southwesterly direction between Nanchang and Changsha—a distance of some 190 miles, as the crow flies—will present great difficulties for the Japanese mechanised units. On the other hand, the capture of Nanchang, which is the capital of the province of Kiangxi, would have resulted in the cutting off of the retreat of the large bodies of Chinese troops operating in the western part of that Province and in the south of the Province of Anhwei. These troops would thus be isolated from the main army in the east.

TAYEH IMPORTANCE

It is further pointed out that even if the Japanese abandoned the plan of advancing on Changsha they would none the less be in a position to cut the Hankow-Canton railway by advancing upstream from Kiukiang to Hwangshikiang, which is 75 miles distant. Possession of Hwangshikiang would be of great importance for the Japanese, since in its vicinity is the town of Tayeh with valuable ore mines. From Tayeh it is less than 50 miles to Hsianning, which is situated south of Hankow, on the railway to Canton and the Japanese would be able to cut off all communications between Hankow and Canton. From Hsianning they could march along the railway.

BEST CHANCE

Foreign observers believe that this route would furnish the Japanese with the best chance of attacking Hankow since the capture of Yochow would imply destruction of all Hankow's means of communication with the South and the West, with the result of bringing the Wuhan region entirely under Japanese control.

Questioned about these possibilities the Chinese military quarters declare they have been fully considered and that all the suitable defensive measures have been taken in consequence. Operations of Japanese along the above route would, it is pointed out, in those quarters, take, in any case, a long time and not be completed before Autumn.—Trans-Ocean.

SITUATION ALONG YANGTSE EASIER

Hankow, Yesterday.

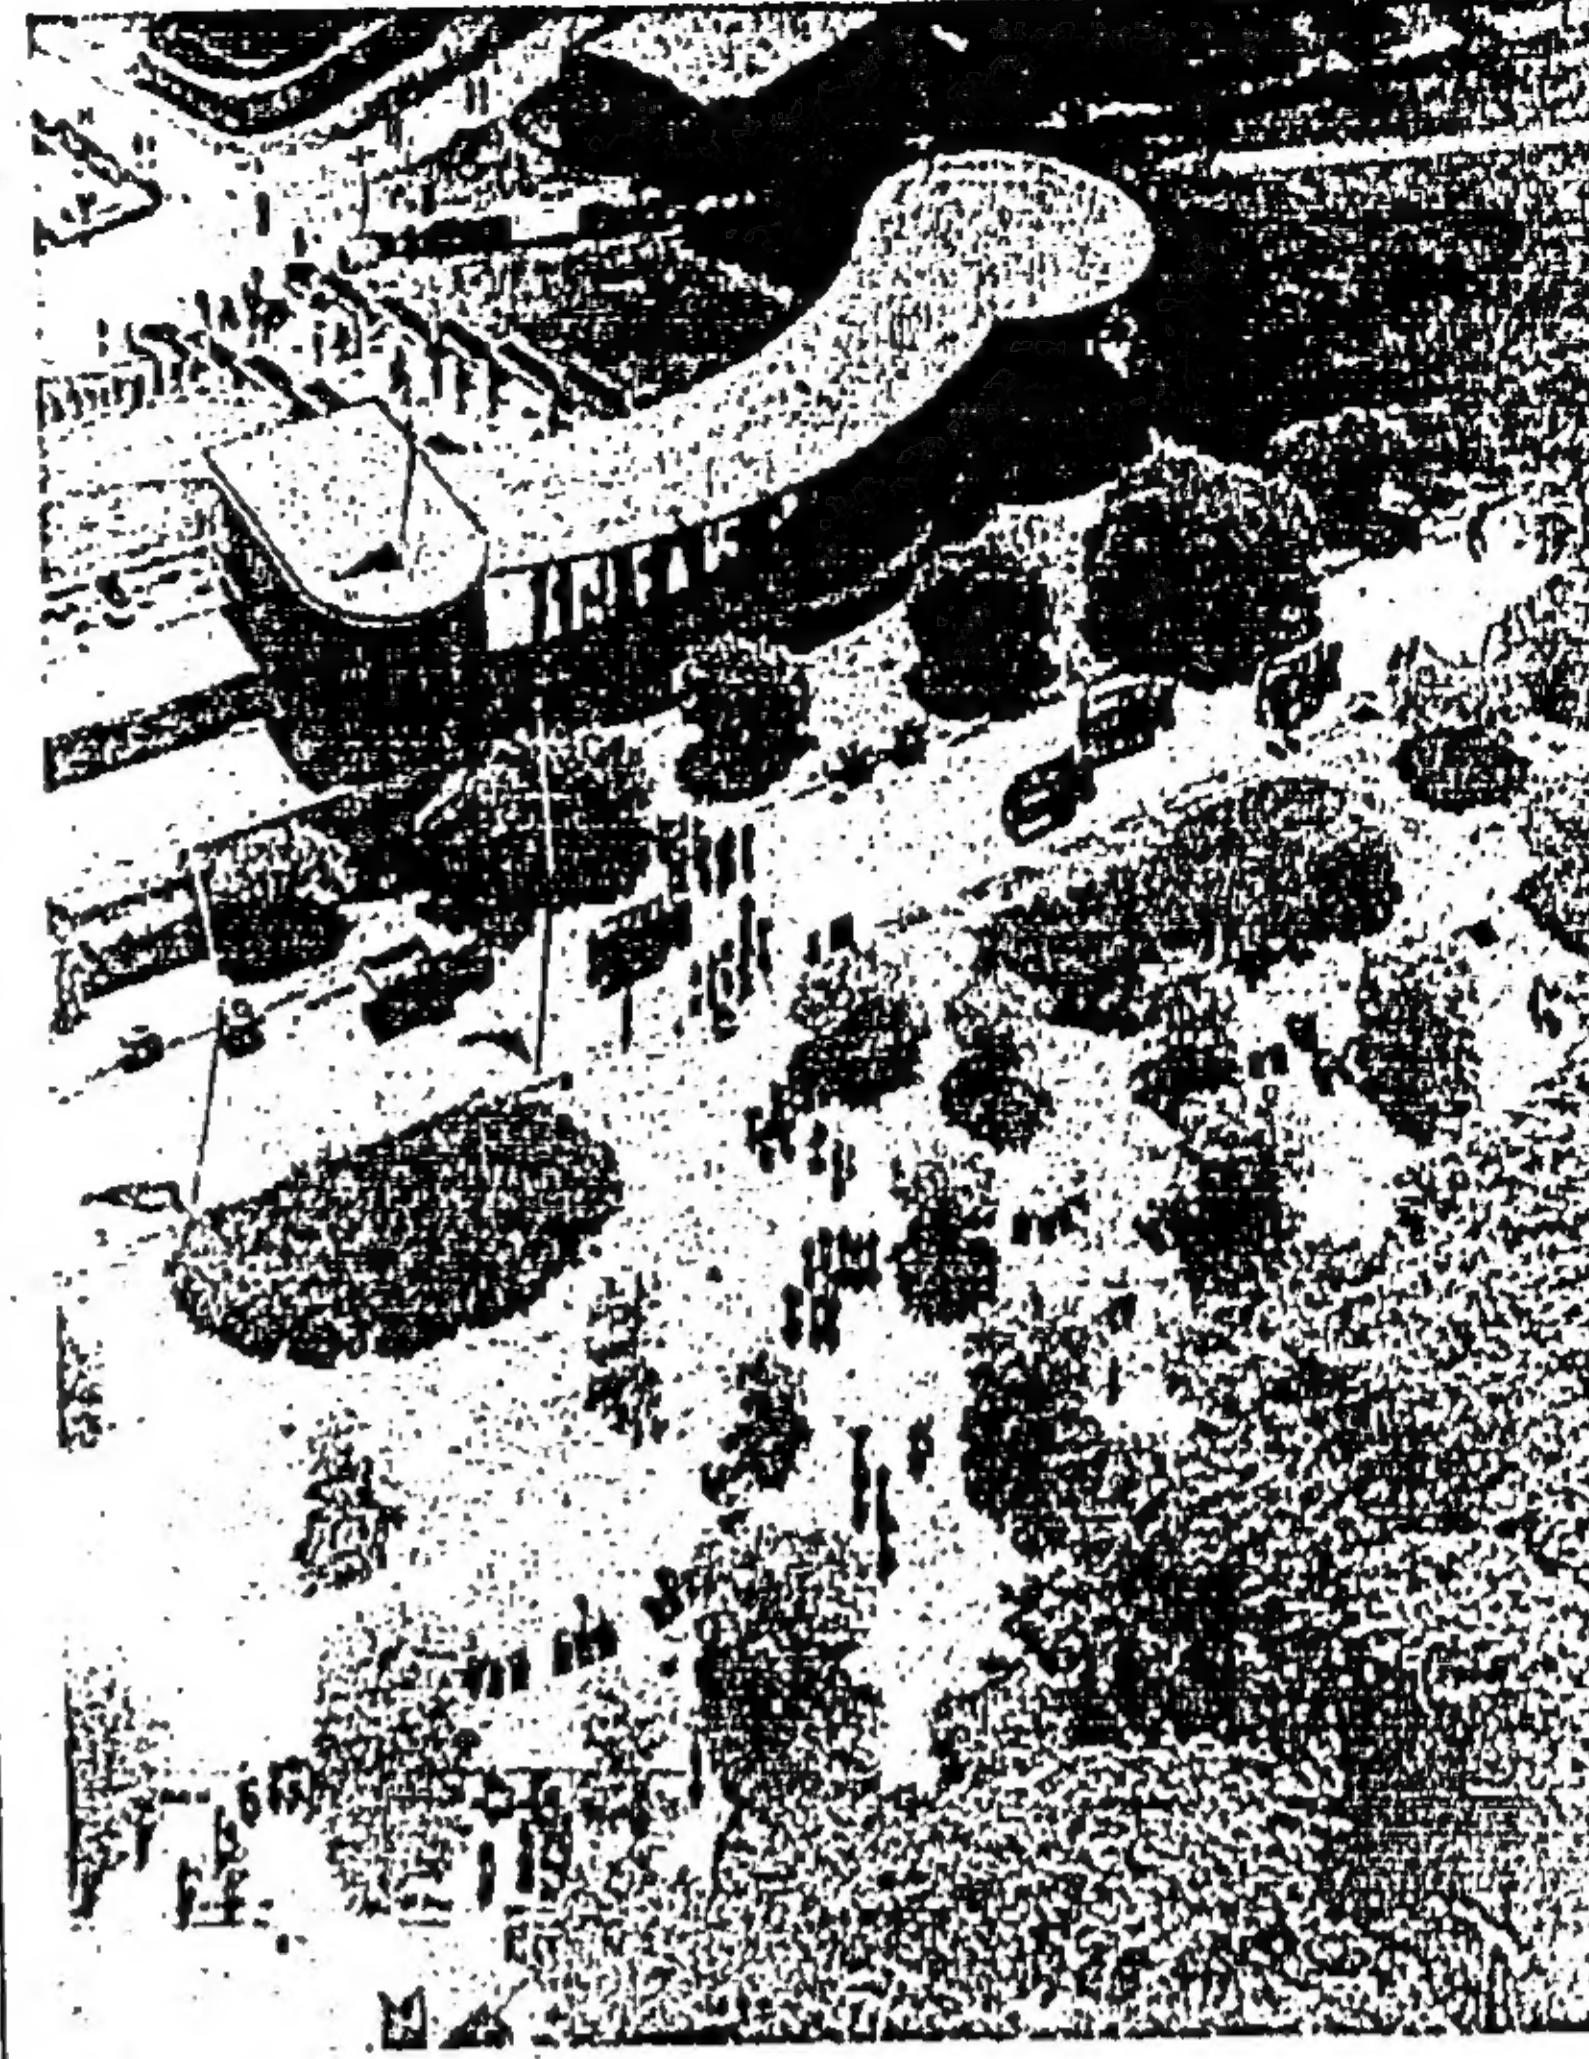

The situation along the Yangtse has eased considerably with the Sino-Japanese positions remaining unchanged, according to a Chinese military communiqué.

One of four Japanese aeroplanes reconnoitring over the Chinese positions in the vicinity of Tukang was shot down by Chinese A.A. fire.

The communiqué asserts that heavy rainfall in Central Anhwei is causing flood in many areas and is seriously impeding the movement of troops.

The opposite forces are said to be facing each other at present in the vicinity of Wangchialpau, north-east of Taihu.

Large numbers of Japanese reinforcements, the communiqué adds, are arriving at Hefei probably for the purpose of attacking Luan and Hoshan west of Hefei, or advancing southward towards Chienhsien for operations at Taihu.—Reuter.

Now that the trees are in full leaf, probably even the men who built the now famous Tower at the Empire Exhibition would hardly recognise this picture, taken from it. In top of picture is the modern ornamental staircase, on the South side of the grounds.

Mr. John Whyatt, Crown Counsel, will prosecute, while accused will be defended by Mr. H. C. Macnamara, instructed by Mr. M. A. da Silva.

MASKED MEN PIRATE JUNK

Piracy of a wolfram cargo, valued at $2,000, was reported to the police yesterday by a junkmaster on arrival with his empty boat.

Curious feature of the affair was that masked men were responsible. Six in number, two armed with rifles and two with revolvers, they boarded from another junk, forced the crew into the hold and transferred the cargo to their craft.

The incident occurred off San Min in Chinese waters.

Peter Snoop Slips Up Somewhere

WE sent Peter Snoop to Tokyo to get the lowdown on the war. He cabled to us an amazing dispatch.

Either everything that has been written about the war is completely false, or Peter has got the biggest scoop of all time. Can it be possible that the lad has slipped up at last?

Please at any price is all honourable Japanese desire (cabled Peter). "We have offered honourable foo our despicable navy and air force, if they will stop their attacks on our unworthy solvers," the Japanese Foreign Minister told me in a special interview.

I have discovered that there is not a single worthless Japanese soldier in China. The armies which are murdering worthy Chinese citizens and bombing honourable Chinese cities are really Russian devils, disguised as unmentionable Japanese, trying to end the democratic government of the two countries, and substitute a Communist dictatorship.

The communiqué asserts that heavy rainfall in Central Anhwei is causing flood in many areas and is seriously impeding the movement of troops.

The opposite forces are said to be facing each other at present in the vicinity of Wangchialpau, north-east of Taihu.

Large numbers of Japanese reinforcements, the communiqué adds, are arriving at Hefei probably for the purpose of attacking Luan and Hoshan west of Hefei, or advancing southward towards Chienhsien for operations at Taihu.—Reuter.

HOW YA GONNA KEEP EM DOWN ON THE FARM

Berlin, Yesterday. Field Marshal Goering, who is charged with the task of carrying out the Four-Year Plan, to-day issued a decree having for its aim to prevent, as far as possible, in the interest of the German's food supplies, and the migration of the rural population to urban areas, which has tended to increase within recent years in consequence of industrial development.

In a preamble to the decree the view is expressed that since more remunerative conditions of work are offered in the towns, adjustment must be found in the interest of the entire community.

The decree enumerates three categories of measures destined to secure such reasonable adjustment. In the first place, possibility will be afforded the rural population to be discharged from the obligation of repayment of State loans to newly married couples. It will be recalled that such loans have been granted since 1933, with the object of increasing the number of marriages and according to the decree, the number of loans made will shortly attain one million.

MAIN CONDITION

Payment of instalments on account of these loans will in the future be suspended at the request of the borrowers, who will also be exonerated from the payment of interest, provided either husband or wife has been working at least five years without a break in agriculture or forestry or as a rural artisan.

Should the period of uninterrupted employment be at least ten years, repayment will be remitted altogether.

The second and third categories of measures provided for by the new decree, concern the granting of special loans to the married rural workers.—Trans-Ocean.

NOTED JAPANESE VISITOR

Denying that he is in Hong Kong on a Government mission, Mr. Shigeru Kamio, of the "Asahi Shimbun", leading newspaper in Japan, arrived in the Colony a few days ago.

Mr. Kamio explained that he was despatched here by his employer to observe the China situation.

Mr. Kamio is now residing at the Hong Kong Hotel.

STRATEGIC GAIN

Salamanca, Yesterday. In view of the strategic position of Nules, capture of that town is considered to constitute a great success for the Insurgent troops operating on the Castellon front.

Nules is only 18 kilometres distant from Sagunto, the Insurgent columns, advancing along the road from Teruel to Sagunto are, according to the latest reports here now, 13 kilometres from the strategically important town, Secorbe. Forty-four kilometres separate Nules from Valencia.

Great havoc is stated to have been wrought in Nules by the Republicans who blew up a large part of the town.

During the last two days, Insurgent troops on the Castellon front occupied a territory covering about 200 square kilometres.—Trans-Ocean.

CASTLE TOPPLES

Paris, Yesterday. Fierce fighting preceded the capture of the medieval castle of Villavieja, according to reports received here from the Spanish front.

The mighty castle built on a 300 metre high rock, seemed to resist all attacks.

Moroccan troops in waves dashed five times against the castle until it was finally wrecked by insurgent artillery. The republican defenders died fighting.

By the capture of the castle, General Aranda controls the road leading from Val de Uxo to Chilches and Monar, which is an important enemy line of retreat.—Trans-Ocean.

PERMANENT REFUGEE COMMITTEE IN PARIS

Evian, Yesterday.

Negotiations between the British and the American delegations to the Evian conference concerning the institution of a Permanent Refugee Commission with headquarters in Paris will in all likelihood be concluded soon, according to informed circles.

The participation of other four States in the project has not yet been definitely announced.

That the English and the American delegations are in disagreement on the question of the competence of the League of Nations as an appropriate body for negotiating with the German Reich on the refugee question, became evident on Friday, but the American representatives finally gained British approval of the plan to permit the Paris headquarters to deal with this problem.

RELUCTANCE SHOWN

It is revealed that delegates from different nations have exhibited extreme reluctance about committing themselves, and the present estimates of the number of Jews that nations are willing to admit will not be more than 31,000 or 32,000 annually.

Considering the fact that the U.S.A. has agreed to admit 27,000

MORLEY SHIRTS

The secret of a well-made shirt lies in the cutting of the collar. The two must be one and indivisible—in appearance at any rate—and that is the way Morley shirts are made.

Morley shirts—tunic or sports—are a joy to buyers because they do not shrink, neither do they fade. Pyjamas of equal merit bear the Morley brand.

FOREIGNERS ASKED TO EVACUATE

Shanghai, Yesterday.
The Japanese spokesman at a press conference this morning revealed that Japanese Naval authorities had informed the Foreign Consuls that the situation on the Yangtze was developing to such an extent that the Japanese desired voluntary evacuation of all foreign nationals in the area between Fukou and Whangshikang, 80 miles up the river from Fukou.—Reuter.

ALLEGED PLOT TO MURDER POLITICIANS

Budapest, Yesterday.

According to reports received here from Belgrade yesterday evening, the Yugoslav authorities have arrested nine members of the Municipal Board of the town of Radovljica in Slovenia, for plotting an attempt on the life of the Yugoslav Minister of Interior, M. Koroszetz, and the Secretary of State, M. Krek.

The conspirators allegedly planned to assassinate the two officials by hurling a bomb at them during a political meeting.—Trans-Ocean.

NEW FORTS TO DEFEND VALENCIA

Barcelona, Yesterday.
It is announced that Valencia, which hitherto was only protected by a belt of fortifications north of the city, is now to be secured also by a fortification system south and west of the town.

Construction of the new fortifications was decided upon in order to prevent the Insurgent capture of the city by circumventing the northern fortifications.

It will be recalled that Bilbao was taken by such a manoeuvre.—Trans-Ocean.

ADVANCE RESCUED

Paris, Yesterday.
According to reports of French war correspondent in the Spanish Insurgent front, south of Castellon, the Caleca Army Corps and the Navarrese troops of General Valiente have resumed their advance in the Espadan Mountains.

Galician detachments of General Aranda, which are advancing along the coast, captured an important position south of the Nules, which is still in the hands of Government troops, and were only 19 kilometres from Sagunto.—Trans-Ocean.

NULES HOLDING OUT

Salamanca, Yesterday.
Insurgent troops, who succeeded in breaking through the Republican front between Nules and Villavieja, are stated to be now only four kilometres from the little town of Valle de Oxo and, to have occupied the outskirts of Mascare.

An Insurgent column operating in Sierra de Espadan has advanced to within ten kilometres of the town of Segorbe, on the railway line from Teruel to Sagunto. Nules which, like Villavieja, lies well to the rear of the Insurgent's present positions, is still stubbornly defended by the republicans. The town is completely encompassed save for a narrow strip of land to the south.

It is believed that the Insurgents, in a desire to avoid the possibly costly frontal attack on the town, have purposely left the garrison this means of escape.—Trans-Ocean.

FOOT-AND-MOUTH OUTBREAK IN HUNGARY

Budapest, Yesterday.
Foot and mouth disease hitherto restricted to the Transdanubian part of Hungary has now reached the southern part of the Hungarian plain.

In the region of Szegedin, several farms have been affected and the authorities have therefore decreed a complete isolation of the endangered area.

Sick pigeons are carriers of the disease, guards have been posted in the fields to shoot down all pigeons sighted in order to prevent further spreading of the disease.—Trans-Ocean.

Catholic Church Likely To Object

Berlin, Yesterday.
The fundamental importance for Austria of the new German Marriage Code which will come into force on August 1, was emphasised by the Reich Minister of Justice, Doctor Guertner, in his explanatory statement to Press representatives here.

The Minister said that the Marriage Law in Austria had hitherto been very complicated owing to its multifariousness. Marriages between Catholics, which were about eighty per cent. of the total number contracted, were subject exclusively to the Canon Law and were consequently celebrated by the Ecclesiastical authority alone, independently of the State.

Marriages between Jews were celebrated and dissolved according to the Mosiac Law and also independently of the State. Civil marriage was, however, obligatory in the case where both parties were Protestants. The Province of Burgenland had a marriage law of its own.

This condition of affairs, said Minister Guertner, had given rise to all sorts of complications, especially in the regard to the question of a possible remarriage of persons separated under the Canon Law "a thore et mensa" which means separation "from bed and board."

There existed in such cases a possibility of the remarriage by dispensation, but a third party who was privately interested in the matter could demand an annulment of such a second marriage with the result that chaotic conditions had developed.

ONE FORM IN FUTURE

In future there would be only one legal form of marriage namely that contracted before an official of the Reich at the Register Office. Separations "from the bed and the board" as well as the Canonical principle of the indissolubility of marriage would be abolished so that the problem of marriage by dispensation would henceforth cease to exist. The Minister went on to say that no doubt would any longer be possible in Austria as to whether a person has legally married or not.

To-day's position is such that the validity of the numerous marriages by dispensation is contestable, the new marriage code, said the Minister, was on the principle destined to facilitate legalisation of all existing marriages by dispensation in Austria, the number of which is estimated at about 15,000.

Decisions in all the cases will be based on the evidence as to whether the partners in the marriage by dispensation have de facto lived together as husband and wife. Even if this should not have been the case, annulment of the marriage can be pronounced only at the demand of one of the parties. Should the demand be granted, the marriage previously contracted under the Canon Law will continue to exist legally.

On the other hand, should no demand be forthcoming or should the demand be refused, the marriage by dispensation will become definitely valid and the former marriage will be "ipso facto" dissolved.

By these means it ought, according to the minister, to be possible within about nine months to ascertain in every case in Austria which persons are legally married and to whom.

The Minister concluded by affirming that the application of the new law was eagerly awaited in Austria.—Trans-Ocean.

SOVIET ACCEPTS BRITISH PLAN

London, Yesterday.
According to a reliable information, the Soviet Government has now accepted the British plan for evacuation of the volunteers from Spain.

It will be recalled that at the plenary session of the Non-Intervention Committee last Tuesday, the Russian delegate accepted the amended plan with the reservation that the plan in its final form must be approved by his Government.—Trans-Ocean.

LITTLE NOTES of Great Importance by Estelle

What a lot of girls ruin their appearance by carelessly applied make-up. A hasty rub of foundation; a dash of rouge; more dash with a powder puff; a dash of lipstick, and the make-up is assumed to be complete. Applied this way, make-up not only fails to produce that well-groomed look which is the aim of every smart woman, but it positively shrinks artificially. Of course, the average woman is not expected to know the art of applied make-up, but she should make it her business to learn a few common sense rules. She should, for instance, look in at the AHANA BEAUTY PARLOR some time next week, where free individual demonstrations using COLONIAL DAMES New Process Third-Dimension Make-up are being given. She will incur no obligation, and at the same time benefit greatly by the expert advice. Demonstrations are given under the personal supervision of a graduate of the California School of Beauty Culture. No make your appointments to-morrow. Second floor, Alexandra Building is the address.

You may think there is nothing new about our suggesting handkerchiefs, but that depends, my friends, upon the handkerchiefs. And when we add that we saw them at THE LINEN CHEST, 210 Gloucester Building, you can bet your bottom dollar they're worth your attention. The kind we have in mind are those very distinguished ultra-smart ones with your initial in one corner, and they come in six different styles . . . so take your choice. Or maybe it's just a negligee you want, other way the answer's THE LINEN CHEST. They have a batch of satin negligees, with beautifully stitched linings, that are just now in bedroom luxury. Exquisite mullens can be bought here, too, all at very popular prices. And by the way, we got a peek at a very special order of bed linens that we simply loved. It was destined for some local home, but there's nothing to prevent you from ordering the same!

Three-in-one handbag! A novelty, girls, a novelty. Someone up and designs a handbag that can change its colour three times. When you want to add a dash of colour to your costume, you can take it out as it is — it wears a pretty jacket of flowered print on these occasions — or you can turn the jacket over and have white linen — or you can remove the jacket all together, and presto! The bag becomes white kid. Are we wrong in assuming that you'll fairly grab at this one? The Ladies' Salon of LANE, CRAWFORD'S is where we saw it . . . and at the same address we also saw handbags in Shantolin, white and multi-coloured beads, patent leather studded with gold knobs, kid, linen, and a group of the niftiest kind with gay checked lining. See, too, the new triangular handbag, shaped like a pyramid, in attractive cotton prints, and take away at least one of their many different evening bags in gold and silver mesh.

If you are growing just a little tired of your summer wardrobe, and have your own ideas about the style of frocks you want to liven things up, cast your eye over the enchanting collection of fabrics at LUCILLE'S. No woman can shake her head and say there's nothing she wants here. The range of selection is too wide, and the patterns too pretty, not to include everybody's choice. And right now you can buy dress lengths of Crepe and Wenko fabrics at amazing bargains. Or you can purchase from their special group of Ilenco and Dorina materials at eighty-five cents the yard . . . or Duro and Chevona fabrics at one dollar a yard. Every piece is guaranteed colour fast. And if you're not in the market for dress lengths, then perhaps you're in the market for a bathing suit. LUCILLE'S are offering a 25 to 25 per cent discount on their entire stock of Jantzen swim-suits for the next fortnight. They're located at 18 Queen's Road, so off you go!

And when you have bought your material you will want a good dressmaker to make it up for you. We suggest PAUL RENNET ET CIE on Nathan Road, where the services of an expert Chinese tailor in yours for the asking. You know how hard it is to find a good Chinese tailor, don't you? Especially one who can understand your requirements from the very start without much tedious explaining and fittings without number? And when you do find him, he is worth hanging on to, isn't he? Of course, he is! Well, you need look no further, girls. This man's a regular prize! Oh — and prices have been very much reduced since last we called. That includes the tailoring as well as stocks in hand — go what more do you want? And just to remind you . . . PAUL RENNET ET CIE are always well supplied with the kind of frock the average woman likes to wear.

You may remember that a fortnight ago we mentioned something about sets of cocktail accessories. Well, popping in on FUNICE in the Peninsula Hotel Arcade the other day, we were shown a perfectly stunning gown designed by Madame Sophie Costidis, and featuring the belt which comprises a part of the set. My dears, you have no idea how much more interesting a frock can appear with one of these belts. The one we saw was fashioned of satin in a perfectly lovely green called Eau-de-Nile, and embroidered all over with sprays of flowers. It was used to dramatise a perfectly simple gown of green georgette to match. Madame Sophie Costidis certainly knows how to design frocks, and by one look at her she can tell just what type of frock will suit you best. So if you aren't gifted with a flair for clothes, let her dress you. You'll be charmed with the result.

Just around the corner from the Peninsula Hotel is the VICTORIA RADIO SHOPPE, who, as you know, are experts in radio repair work. So if your radio isn't behaving as it should, tell them about it. They will not only be very interested, but offer to help. They can diagnose the whole trouble and prescribe the right treatment on the spot. Whether it's an overhauling, a couple of new tubes, or just a spot of new life put into your 1930 "No-Go," you can depend on the VICTORIA RADIO SHOPPE . . . they never let you down. They use only the best spare parts and employ only expert workmen to do the job . . . and here's another point in your favour. If they were just a twenty-weeny lock-up with no facilities worth mentioning, they'd have to charge pretty stiff. But because they're completely staffed and equipped, they can work more quickly and, of course, they don't shatter systems when they send out bills.

The many uses to which CARNATION MILK can be put in the home, convinces us that no household should be without it. As a substitute for mother's milk its qualities are unexcelled, and as an ingredient for cooking it makes all the difference to the flavour. And here is another interesting discovery. Now you can have sour milk whenever you want it — and never have to guess how much soda to use! Just add vinegar to CARNATION MILK and, according to whether you dilute the milk or leave it undiluted, it's sour milk or "cream"! The degree of sourness does not vary; the correct amount of soda is known — no foods are never spoiled by "soda taste" or too little leavening. It is ideal for all sour milk or cream recipes. So order a can or a case from your comprador to-day, and if he tries to offer you anything else — brain the man! Insist on CARNATION — the milk from contented cows.

Art And Victoria

NEXT Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday from 10:30 a.m. to sundown, Colonists will have an opportunity of viewing and buying some first rate pictures. Sponsored by the Hong Kong Working Artists Guild an exhibition of woodcuts by Doctor Emma Milch-Bormann will be shown in the Cathedral Hall in aid of war torn China. Acknowledged by art critics the world over as a kingpin engraver, Milch-Bormann has ten cuts in choicy New York's Metropolitan and half-a-dozen in the British Museum. Wife of the head of Pakhoi hospital, she herself is a professor of paleontology at Vienna University, and only discovered her talent Professor Peter de Lampi was conducting a series of experiments in his laboratory at Leyden University. For some years this Dutch scientist had interested himself in the effect of low temperatures on life. Beginning with insects and animals, he discovered that his subjects kept at an high temperature aged rapidly and died sooner than those subjected to a low temperature acts as a brake on life and prolongs it. The professor observed that bodies of lost explorers in the Arctic regions who had been frozen to death, were always found in a state of perfect preservation, even when their deaths had taken place many years before.

As luck had it, the taxi with both brakes shrieking, skidded into the lady, knocked her panties into a puddle, and then owner into our arms.

SINCE the artist has given her pictures to China, and because the exhibition's organisers know that Brummagem brass work is preferred to Van Gogh's in most Hong Kong drawing-rooms, Cathedral Hall exhibits are priced from $10 to $30, a low buy that is safer than Manila mines and as they already fetch twice that money elsewhere, likely to prove an attractive look up with a handsome capital appreciation when the time comes to unload.

THE unruly and paying guests bored by Landseer cows, will appreciate the artist's frank gusto and the broad vision that never permits essentials to become lost in pointless detail. Her hair was grey, sparse, lifeless; her face seemed with a hundred wrinkles; kidney and liver trouble blotched a sallow skin, and her heart was so weak that she was forbidden to climb stairs. She looked, acted and felt like an old woman. This premature disintegration had begun at the age of sixteen and kept Miss Broogg a spectator of life all her adult years. Other girls danced, flirted, married, had babies, while Anna sat by, dying at the rate of two minutes to everybody else's one.

SCORES of doctors interested themselves in her case and prescribed treatments that varied from nothing but tomato juice to everything but tomato juice with identical results—Anna's body refused to let up in its race to the grave. June 28, 1932.

Dear Sirs,
For nearly 12 months I have been suffering with Sciatica, and could hardly walk with the pains in both legs. I was recommended to take 'ASPRO' which I did, night and morning, with the result that in a fortnight the pain had practically left me, and I was able to walk about in perfect ease.

Yours faithfully,
(Sgd.) B. L. HARRIS.

ONE day last January I was called to a flat off Ebury Street. Producer Andre Van Gyneghem drew a circle on a half-sheet of notepaper. "That's the Old English Pageant lent of Wembley Stadium (why don't we still spell it that strike?), which means a wooden stage. Pageant was once democratic in the rule, instead of in the exception.

That was the beginning of the Pageant of Co-operation. Or, rather, not the beginning, for there had had to be months of planning, financial and otherwise, before it reached that stage.

At Wembley last Saturday afternoon we saw the outcome. The day was International Co-operators' Day—a day of celebration in almost all countries except the Fascist States—of the idea of price without profit, of the living proof that ordinary men and women banded together in this way can beat the capitalist entrepreneur at his own game, and show him up for an exorcism.

This year, the Movement in Great Britain has set out to translate all that into colour and movement and pageantry. The Movement is out to "put itself across." And that, by itself, is a fact worth pausing over.

The text goes on: "The Fool then calls in his five sons: first Pickle Herring, then Blue Britches, then Ginger Britches, Pepper Britches, and last calls out: Come now, you Mr. Allspice!"

Most important of all, we remember May Day. The nineteenth century Socialists did well when

This has been well understood strikes that gave France the 40-hour week in Britain for many a century, hour-weeks and holidays with pay. It is an English word. It comes from the Old English Pageant lent of Wembley Stadium (why don't we still spell it that strike?), which means a wooden stage. Something like that shall use something like that shall use the exception.

Think of "Midsummer Night's Dream" or of "Westward Ho!" Think of the workingmen in the Mediaeval Guilds, who performed the Miracle and Morality plays that form one of the most important parts of English dramatic literature. Nor should the mummers be forgotten.

Our play is the best, kind sirs, That you would like to know,

And we will do our best, sire,
And think it well bestowed.

We are come over the mire and moss,
We dance an Hobby Horse,
A Dragon you shall see,
And a wild worm for to see . . .

The text goes on: "The Fool then calls in his five sons: first Pickle Herring, then Blue Britches, then Ginger Britches, Pepper Britches, and last calls out: Come now, you Mr. Allspice!"

That's pageantry, too! In France, the popular and progressive movement has recaptured the pageantry of the "Marsillaise." I have sometimes played with the notion that we in turn might even recapture the pageantry of "Rule, Britannia"—though we should have to alter the words. And why not?

Free Britannia,
Britons men on land and waves,
Britons never shall be slaves!

But it would not suit Mr. Chamberlain.

Saturday's pageant was an attempt to draw together some of the threads of our great history. Not all the threads. There is not space and time in it to develop the pageantry of the political movement, and say the Chartists, or the Trade Union Movement and, say, Tolpuddle.

It was the biggest undertaking of its kind yet attempted in the British Co-operative Movement.

But it is a portent. It is also one hopes—only a beginning.

And there's pageantry for you!

They brought back this—once the year's chief holiday in Western Europe, which the puritans stampede out.

I look forward to the day when May Day in Britain will build up into such a pageant as has not yet been seen. In saying that I think it is conceivable that a friendly heckler might help me to the next point by asking: "Isn't May Day good enough as it is?"

Why spoil it with artifice and pageantry?"

One answer has been made already. The other side makes use enough of its pageantry—and another answer is that when the imagination of the people is touched pageantry of a very real and powerful kind comes into being.

What else are Hunger Marches? They were—and still are—a sign that men's imaginations have been touched by bigger issues. Unemployment figures that could be read and forgotten became a host of men and women marching.

That's pageantry! I remember a day when the hunger Marching women met outside the gates of Buckingham Palace, and two sorts of pageantry came together.

I remember, too, an unremembered pageant in Paris. It was the Sunday after the great stay-in a group in Co-operation's great Pageant.

"BOCHDALE 'PIONEERS,'"

IMPORTANT FACTS ABOUT FEVER

The reason why your stomach rejects solid foods when you have fever is because your wasted body tissues are crying out for moisture. This makes you desperately thirsty.

But very often your weakened stomach cannot retain even the ordinary fluid foods. Yet you must have nourishment to rebuild your exhausted body quickly.

Doctors find that Horlicks can not only be easily digested, but gives your body all the nourishment it needs in its weakened state. Horlicks quickly builds up strength to meet renewed attacks. It is invaluable during illness and convalescence, if taken regularly. Get Horlicks to-day.

In these difficult times of anxiety and worry, the task of carrying on and doing work which must be done is a doubly difficult one which must tend to exhaust one's nervous energy.

Horlicks builds up strength and prevents that listlessness and tiredness caused by constant nervous strain. H. M. Hodges, 400-408, Asia Life Building, Queen's Road, Hong Kong.

REVENTLOW BABY MADE WARD

Countess's Application Seeking Judicial Separation In Denmark

London, Yesterday.

It has now been disclosed authoritatively that Lance Haugwitz-Reventlow, two-years-old heir to the countess's fortune, had been made a ward in Chancery, just before Count Kurt Haugwitz-Reventlow, left Paris for London by the night ferry to surrender to the warrant for his arrest.

The boy, who has been made a ward in Chancery on the countess's application, is thus placed under the control of the court until he becomes 21. Among the things the court has power to direct are how he is to be educated and maintained.

The boy's nationality is not at present known. Although he is Danish by parentage, he is a British subject by birth.

The countess, who has taken preliminary steps in Copenhagen to secure a judicial separation with a view to obtaining a divorce in accordance with Danish law, has booked a suite at a leading hotel on the Lido for the end of July, according to a report from Venice.

Count Haugwitz-Reventlow, for whose arrest a warrant was issued at Bow-street last week, alleging that he had issued threats against his wife.

For more than a week Baby Lance has been one of the most closely guarded children in Europe.

GUARDED BY DETECTIVE

When playing on the lawn at Winfield House, the countess's home in Regent's Park, N.W., she has been accompanied by a nurse and a detective.

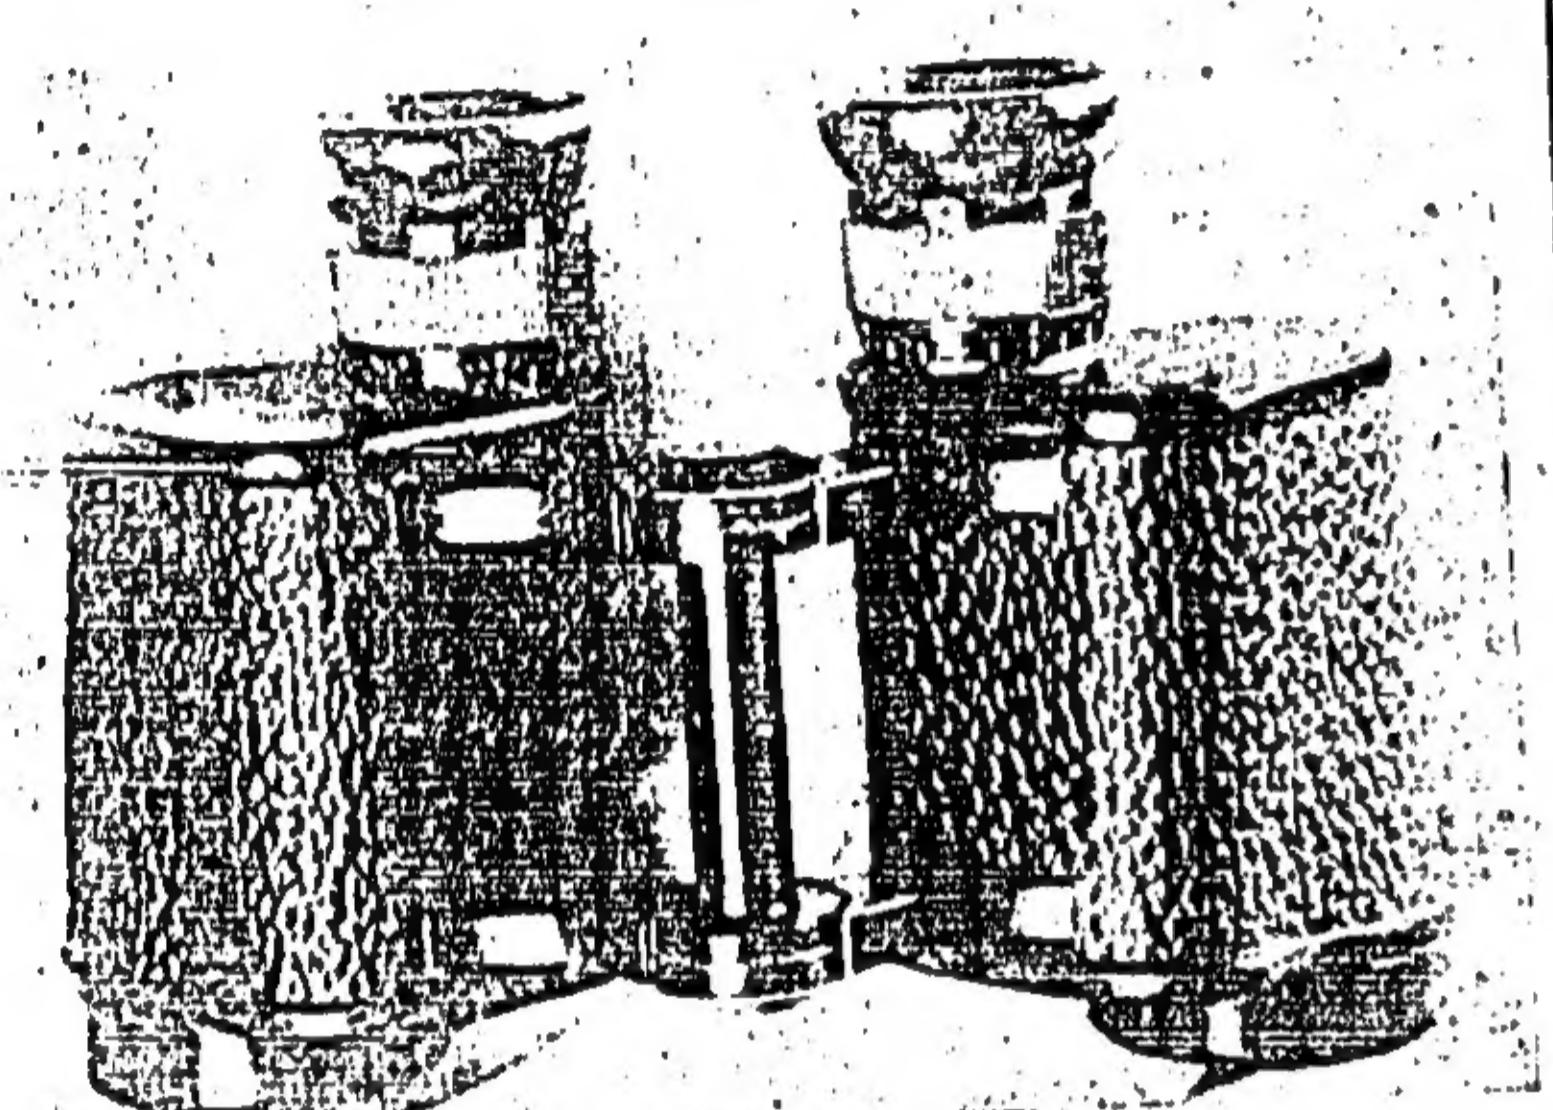

Mr. Franklin Hutton, the countess's father, who had been staying at the same hotel as the count, has left Paris in the Orient

Mr. A. Landau, of Jimmy's Kitchen, No. 20, Hankow Road, has reported that someone entered the premises on Friday night by removing a pane of glass, and stole $1 from the cash register.

EXHIBITION RAYS

LIGHT is the highlight of the Empire Exhibition. A vast electric panorama of amber, purple, crimson, green, gold, cascading in bewildering beauty against the subtle backcloth of Bellahouston's hills.

Long before you arrive a tower rising from the crest of a hill in one majestic sweep of 300 feet, stabs the quiet sky; a pencil thin Cyclope whose red, green and yellow eyes are so intense that speeding through the night I caught their winking beams a full hundred miles away.

The mere fascination of this colossal beacon acts as an irresistible magnet to the traveller. Drawing level with a Daimler sedately driven by an uniformed chauffeur, an old lady poked a Victorian bonnet out of the window, and implored curiously asked what it meant. Slowing down, I enlightened her and added that I was on my way there. "Harris, follow this car. You may exceed the limit," she added, eyeing my super charged Riley. Harris grinned cheerfully, and as I touched seventy on one stretch, he must have had lots of fun.

By Margaret Duncan

Guided by the beacon, we entered the world's largest car park. Illuminated by powerful lamps it is as busy as Piccadilly Circus without the confusion. Scores of uniformed attendants handle the never ending stream of vehicles with clockwork precision, an excellent reception that soothes the grumpiest motorist, and a detail of a super-organisation that must have lain awake o'night figuring out how to defeat the great wits.

Parking booths for babies, stocked with Donald Ducks and mechanical rocking horses, relieve tired mothers. Lost children contrasted by rose checked Glasgow hospital nurses, and equipped with all electric kitchens able to turn out the weeny supper at the pressing of a button; lost property offices; information bureaux manned by expert linguists, and police station, cater for the lost, stolen, and strayed, aided by a whole corps of specially trained guides whose sole job is the comfort and education of the visitors to the world's greatest show.

The exhibition is crossed by two giant staircases descending from the hill on the north and south sides with cascades flowing between them. On each side of the hill the water flows over three sections of five steps, each about fifteen feet wide and three feet deep. A glass lip, illuminated from behind by coloured lights backed by reflecting mirrors, makes each step a waterfall shot with iridescent loveliness. While your feet are bathed in fairy light, fountains floodlit in flame, amber, blue-green and silver, shoot up and fall in feathery fronds of jewelled spray on either side of you.

So vast are the grounds and buildings that the thousand of visitors (over three million have already clicked past the turnstiles) are able to move about in complete comfort, and I climbed this marvellous staircase at my ease. At the top, dominating the exhibition, is the tower, its base surrounded by restaurants built on stilts. The trees of the park grow through the floors, and like Tarzan I dined at a rustic table set among the upper branches.

The tower itself is a marvel of engineering ingenuity. Designed by Mr. Thomas Tait, the famous architect of Sydney Harbour Bridge, its base dimensions are a tiny 26 by 24 feet resting on a solid 3,200 ton block of concrete fifty feet deep in the earth. Shooting up this slender steel shaft in an express lift, I got out at the top balcony of the three that can hold six hundred people. Five hundred feet above sea level, I gazed down on twinkling lights sixty miles away, while immediately below, spaced out, dwarfed—lay the exhibition.

A whisper away, staring out into the mysterious night, stood a lad and his lassie. Knotted scarf, skin-tight jacket, basin crop and check cap, proclaimed him typical Glasgow hoodlum. Reckless with cheap scent, her mouth a crimson blotch, the girl drew closer to him, shivering when the cool breeze moulded her cheap cotton frock to a pitifully thin body. The lad put an arm round her, caressing a flat breast with one hand, and with the other drawing out a bottle half full of beer from his coat pocket. Draining it, he leaned over the balcony "Dinna drop it," she said sharply, and added softly: "God's speerin' at ye." May be he was, for the lad ear-fully replaced the bottle, no doubt reserving it for Ranger's next match.

Descending the tower, I wandered through an enchanted wood with hundreds of floodlights on bushes and leaves turning green to shimmering silver, and passing along a quiet avenue festooned with balls of glowing fruit, came

The largest of the buildings that house the exhibition's treasures, the Palace of Engineering, is a magnificent example of modern architecture. Clean, lines and simple curves have been blended into a graceful whole that achieves a startling beauty beneath pastel tinted floodlights.

H.K. EDUCATION POLICY

IT has become apparent this week, if mayhap the point had not been already driven fully home, that the modifications introduced in this year's School Leaving Examination have failed to appease those critics who are in the soundest position to judge of the merits of the drastic changes in Hong Kong's educational policy authorised some two years ago. Both Miss H. D. Sawyer, headmistress of the Diocesan Girls' School, and the Rev. C. B. R. Sargent, headmaster of the D.B.S., attacked the examination on fundamental grounds. Mr. Sargent was again emphatic in the opinion that the standard is not suitable for a leaving certificate, condemned the manner in which the work of Class 2 is dictated by the requirements of the Examination, and particularly deplored its encouragement to boys to leave school before they have, in reality, completed their education. Miss Sawyer challenged the insistence that the examination be taken by Class 2 on psychological grounds. Apart from the inherent defects in the examination requirements, Miss Sawyer pointed out Government's policy represents an inducement to girls to leave school at a highly critical stage in their development, when discipline and guidance are paramountly desirable, more than at any other time in their school career. These criticisms, it must be admitted, are mild by comparison with those voiced more generally following the first test of the new School Leaving Certificate policy some twelve months ago. They indicate, nevertheless, that modifications can never cure what is radically wrong, and that it is high time the Colony's educational system and policy was submitted for further review, in the light of the experience gained in the last two years.

It is a matter, too, which demands the consideration of the general public as well as educationists. There is far too much of an inclination to treat of education as a problem to be dealt with and solved by Education Boards and teachers—as altogether outside the purview of the "laiy." It is an attitude typical of the Colony, though it remains a fact that the general public, both as taxpayers and as citizens, can benefit themselves and local education by learning more fully what that education means at present, and how it can be bettered for the future. The people after all, get the system, like the government, which they deserve—or demand. Examination reform, for instance, depends not only on what the Education Department or the teachers desire, but also on a change in the attitude towards public examinations by parents and employers. Since comprehensive reforms, such as those which would most certainly advocated by the Colony's outstanding school masters and mistresses, would involve additional Government expenditure, the taxpaying public should know the educational conditions now prevailing, so that they can offer an informed and intelligent judgment as to what reforms are necessary and worth while, and how far they should extend.

That our educational system can be improved in many ways has been sufficiently indicated by the fire of criticism directed upon it at various times. Sir Geoffrey Northcote, himself, as a progressive Governor, recognises the need for reforms, and at the D.B.S. put his finger on the root of most of local controversy, the Grant-in-Aid system.

What is needed in the Colony is a step forward to a more flexible type of education. Advances are still required in respect to pre-school welfare, school equipment and facilities for physical training, provision of libraries, modernising of the curriculum, and many other important matters. So, too, aesthetic training, vocational and technical work, handicrafts, and social studies all need development with Government aid to produce a better balanced education. To fit our future citizens, for their responsibilities, our education must be more realistic and purposeful, training our youth to think clearly and individually, preparing it for the task of grappling with the problems of this Colony and these times.

THIS WEEK

Thursday marked the conclusion of the first year of Sino-Japanese hostilities, an occasion for a powerful reaffirmation of China's of the Yangtze. ## ART VERSUS CULTURE

PEOPLE OF culture love art?

They do our artists love culture? They appear not to. They not only attack the culture of our era, they seem almost to attack culture in general. They imitate primitive art, forgetting that primitive peoples possessed elaborate cultures of their own.

They delve into the unconscious mind, down to levels too deep for education and culture to have penetrated, only to fetch up elemental items that nobody understands—not even the surrealists themselves.

Though they need the support of the culture-addicts, they cannot bring themselves to be polite to them. If the people of "taste and refinement" turn furiously away, the artists are indignant. If they remain humbly loyal, the artists are contemptuous.

This is something more than the quite normal and healthy bickering that has always occurred between artists and possible clients. It is something more sinister than the battle in which artist-warriors, clad in velvet jackets and marching in sandals, went forth to fight the Philistines. The desperate condition of world-culture has affected the world of culture to the point where the artist seems almost continuously at war with himself, producing works which no himself does not like.

For example, at the concerts of the Contemporary Music Society, to which I belong, I observe that hardly anybody seems to enjoy himself.

This is not just a case of composers being unable to see the merits of rivals. As a body, they do not seem to like modern music. And painters do not like a great deal of modern art. And so on. But if you ask "why not do something more likable?", they will tell you that honestly forbids them to produce pleasant art except in the "amusing" or "sentimental" vein.

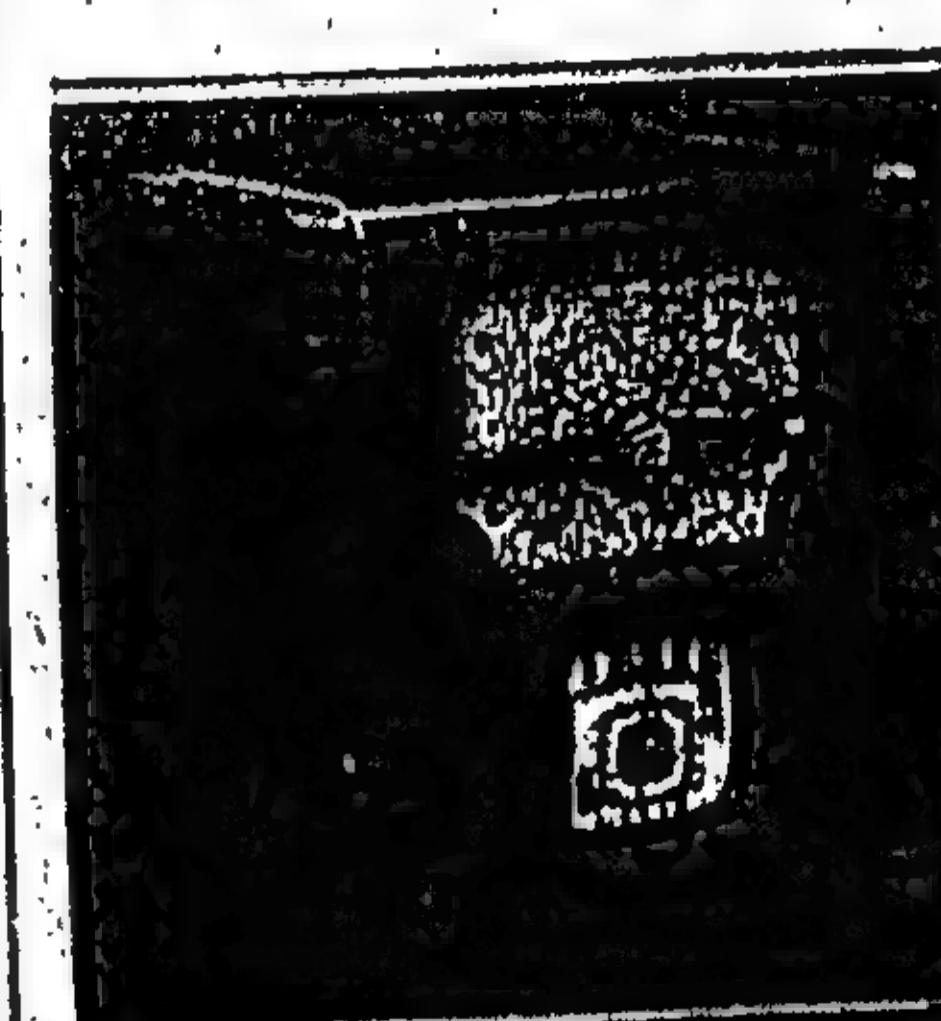

You may feel that honesty ought to forbid them to produce anything else. "Isn't art something to do with beauty; and isn't that peasant?" you inquire. But you find that, even allowing for the sensationalists, the poseurs, the theorists, you are confronted by a multitude of sincere artists to whom light works—charming and pleasant—seem to be almost impossible.

You observe that even the professional charmers find it hard to prevent shadows from the world darkening their dreams. The only pleasant art left to you is thriller-and-glamour fiction, sex-and-rend pictures, ballroom music, and Hollywood hokum.

If we are to understand this disharmony within the artist, and first how much of the conflict is

JAPANESE WARSHIPS LEAVE HAINAN WHEN FRENCH ARRIVE

Disclosure By Hanoi Correspondent Of French Journal

After many British protest during a raid on June 27, by Franco's bombers on Valencia, the British ship Arion was bombed. One of the bombs set fire to her and she was towed outside the harbour where she blazed down to the water line. Near the burning hulk were the protruding masts of the Thorpehall, Thorpeness and Sunion, other victims of insurgent bombs. One member of the crew of the Arion was killed; the others had remarkable escapes. Photo shows—The Arion ablaze after being hit by Franco's bombers. ## GRAN CHACO PEACE TREATY NOW IN SIGHT

Washington, Yesterday. An agreement has been reached in principle on the terms of the Peace Treaty to be signed between Bolivia and Paraguay to end the long dispute concerning the Gran Chaco, according to the official information that has been received by the State Department from Buenos Aires.

The signature of the Treaty is subject only to agreement on details and the approval of the two Governments.

ARMY'S BATTLE DRESS

London, Yesterday. Eight soldiers in the new "battle dress" were inspected by His Majesty the King at Buckingham Palace yesterday.

Two officers were among the party, wearing gaiter boots like the rest. Open-necked tunics and different shades of khaki are under consideration for battle dress.—British Wireless.

The Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, has expressed his satisfaction with the agreement, describing it as a major step towards permanent peace on the American Continent.—Reuter.

DR. ECKNER'S CHARGE AGAINST MR. ICKES

Friedrichshafen, Yesterday. Celebrations yesterday in honour of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Count Ferdinand von Zeppelin, father of the dirigible, were centred on this city, which was specially decorated for the occasion.

The principal event of the day was a memorial service held in the main hall of the Zeppelin works, attended by the daughter of Count Zeppelin, Commander Rosendahl of New York, Director Bronsing of Amsterdam and Dr. Eckener.

Recalling the great services of Count Zeppelin to Germany and the world, Dr. Eckener also mentioned several problems confronting airship travel prominent among these being that of acquiring helium.

Declaring that the helium problem revolves about politics alone, Dr. Eckener stated: "We are refused helium under the most unusual circumstances. One of six members of the American Manufacturers' Board suddenly declared that the helium which had already been promised to us could constitute a menace from a military point of view and therefore should not be released."

SINGLE MEMBER

Although the military experts from the War and Naval Departments both denied that the supply of helium required could constitute a military menace, the single opposing member of the committee, who is Secretary of the Interior, would not reverse his decision.

As President Roosevelt assured me personally that the question has not been settled, I am convinced that we shall eventually obtain the helium since refusal works against the interests of American airship circles which require our co-operation. For the time being we are compelled to struggle to keep the Zeppelin works in existence.

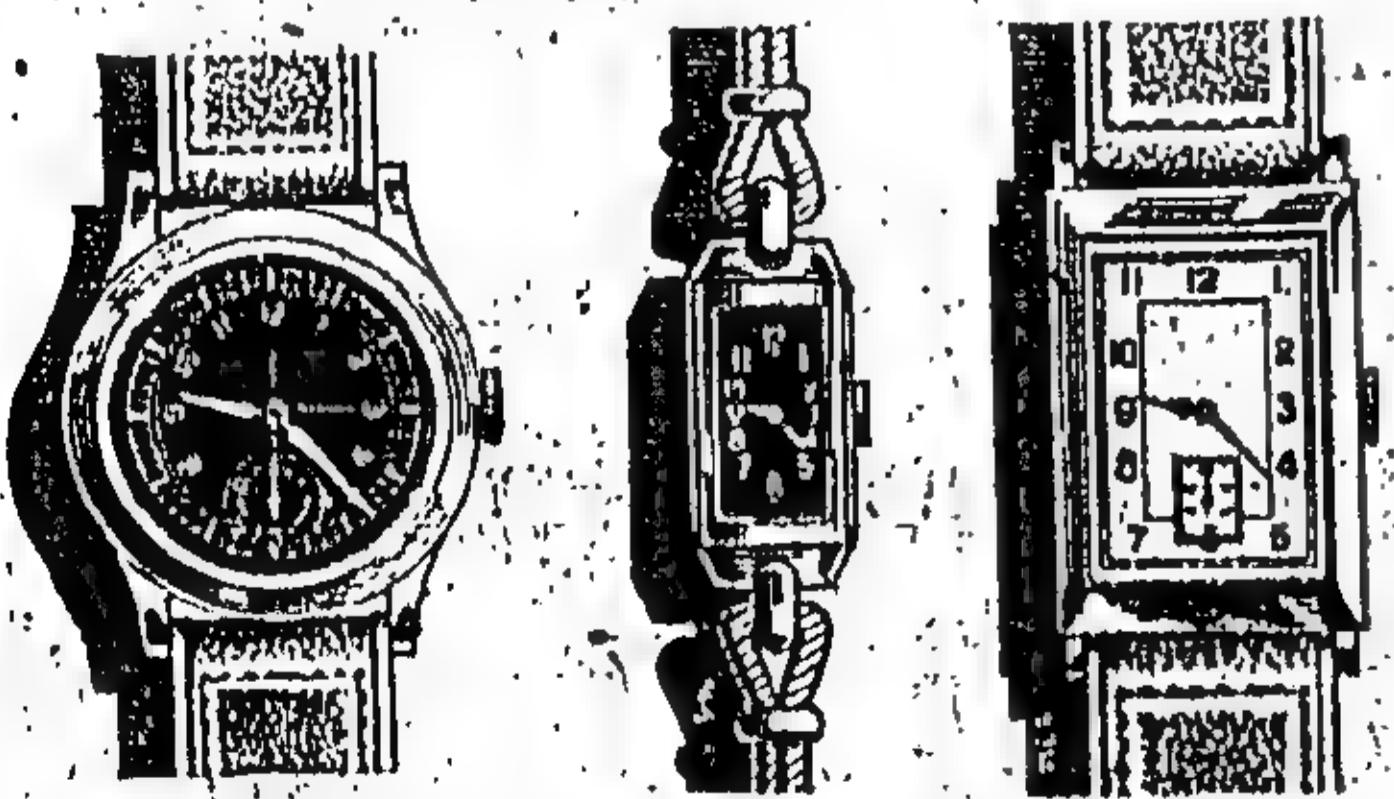

During the afternoon the newly completed Zeppelin Museum was officially opened. Count von Brandenstein-Zeppelin unveiled a bronze statue of Count Zeppelin.—Trans-Ocean.

French Analysis Of Peril Of Jap. Plans To Hong Kong

Paris, Yesterday. That the recent developments in the Far East have greatly increased the French general public's interest in the problems of Indo-China are evidenced by a lengthy report cabled to the "Paris Soir" by that paper's correspondent in Hanoi, the capital of Tonkin. The report points out that the danger of an eventual Japanese occupation of the island of Hainan has caused considerable anxiety not only among the Chinese who transferred their Ministries and arsenals to Yunnan and are preparing to make Yunnanfu (Kunming) the new capital of China, but also among foreigners living in the Far East, according to statements by British and Dutch personages from Hong Kong, Java and Manila during the past week.

In Indo-China, where developments were hitherto watched with complete calm, anxiety is also beginning to be felt since it is realised that the occupation of Hainan by Japan would threaten the Philippines and Borneo, the Gulf of Tonking, Kwangchowwan and also Hong Kong.

According to the report, Japanese rights regarding these islands, the paper emphatically, declares that the islands in an cane are not the concern of Japan.

In view of the moderate tone of the Japanese representations, political quarters here are inclined to believe that the Japanese protest was prompted above all by considerations of public opinion at home and the view, therefore, prevails that Japan does not plan to take any further steps in the matter.—Trans-Ocean.

JAPAN'S POSITION

He points out that the Japanese could easily occupy the island with a force of 5,000 men, although 20,000 Chinese troops are stationed on the island. He then stresses that Hainan could be converted without difficulty into a naval and air base of the first order since the island possesses excellent harbours.

The military authorities in Indo-China say the correspondent is giving close attention to the situation.

The Commander-in-Chief of the French troops in Indo-China, General Martin, recently inspected the French concession Fort Bayard in Kwangchowwan.

No fewer than 20,000 inhabitants of Hainan have already left the island for the Chinese mainland and the evacuation still continues.—Trans-Ocean.

JAPANESE NOTE MILD

Paris, Yesterday. The note containing the Japanese Government's representations against the military measures taken by France on the Paracel Island group, which was presented to the French Ambassador in Tokyo, M. Arsene Henry, was received here on Friday.

According to quarters close to the French Foreign Office, the note is couched in a friendly tone and will therefore be examined by the French Government in similar spirit.

In a lengthy editorial on the Sino-Japanese conflict, "The Temps" cites the recent utterances of the Emperor of Japan, Prince Konoye and Marshal Chiang Kai-shek in order to show that there is no hope of an early termination of the hostilities.

SERIOUS DANGER

The paper then points out that there is a serious danger that the conflict may lead to a perpetuation of international tension since other great Powers could not allow Japan to endanger their interests in the Far East. With regard to the Paracel Islands dispute, the paper points out that for a hundred years these islands have been under French control. After stressing that China has never demanded respect of her

ANGLO-AMERICAN TRADE PACT SOON

London, Yesterday. The Anglo-American trade agreement is to be signed before the House of Commons adjourns on July 29, according to the "Evening Standard".

The paper reasons that should an agreement not be reached during the next three weeks, it would be necessary to postpone the negotiations until next Autumn and neither Washington nor London wishes to incur such a delay.

THE DUCE

Rome, Yesterday. In commemoration of Mussolini's recent visit to Libya, a huge equestrian statue of the Duce will shortly be erected at Tripoli, according to the paper.

The statue, which will be three metres high, has been designed by the well-known Italian sculptor, Ruggieri.—Trans-Ocean.

Tests Have Now Revealed

He remembered he had left the gas on under the prunes.

THE application of scientific research to social problems is advancing rapidly. Scarce a day passes but some startling and significant fact of human motive or behaviour is revealed, generally the more surprising because ordinary people have known it all the time.

The scope and usefulness of modern social science may be estimated by recent experiments on postmen carried out by the London School of Hygiene.

The postmen had complained that the increase in flat-dwelling makes greater demands on their strength. The object of the experiments was to measure the extra energy, if any, involved in climbing stairs. The postmen were asked to walk upstairs while breathing into a bag worn on the face. Their breath was then measured by a gas-meter, and analysed for its oxygen-content to show the amount of energy expended.

I will interrupt my narrative at this point to allow an interval for the expression of modified and respectful applause.

To the simple and unscientific mind this test may seem unnecessary. Even among my readers I fear there may be some who, with the vain self-assurance of ignorant minds, arrogantly assert that they do not need a gas-meter to tell them when they are out of breath, nor even a barometer to tell them when they want a drink. I do not question the honesty in the other case, a means to heavenly grace?

Clearly he is not. No more, then, can a feeling of exhaustion after going upstairs be attributed, without confirmation by scientific investigation, to the act of climbing them.

Still less can it be attributed to the stairs themselves. For it has now been established, after a series of exhaustive tests by a joint commission of leading physiologists and pathologists, that we are bound to ask: How do they know?

They feel tired—yes. But how do they know whether that particular sensation is really tiredness and not some pathological condition which, to the mind untrained chologists and physiologists, that a flight of stairs is incapable of feeling, desire, or autogenous activity.

(See Bullock: "Erklärungh über Treppenempfindungsprüfung." Consult also Födöle's analysis of the evidence in the famous staircase mystery—"Did she fall or was she pushed?")

There are many reasons why a man might feel depressed in the pursuit of his calling. It may be lack of Vitamin P in his diet. It may be indigestion or religious doubt. Or it may be nervous shock, brought on by suddenly remembering that on leaving home in the morning he had forgotten to turn out the gas-ring under the prunes.

Such reservations are of paramount importance to the scientifically-trained mind of the sociologist.

* * *

It is not always easy to distinguish between cause and effect. Take a simple instance: If, while sitting in a bus, a man becomes conscious of desire for old ale or a conviction of sin, is he thereby justified in asserting that the London Passenger Transport Board is, in the one case, a menace to national sobriety, or tell them when they want a drink.

AFB

ON Tuesday, June 21, in the House of Commons, Mr. Chamberlain withdrew the protection of the British flag from British airmen and ships lying in Spanish Republican ports.

On the following day, two more of these steamers anchored off Valencia were bombed and destroyed by an airman in Franco's service.

If the order for that outrage had actually come from Downing Street, the Prime Minister's responsibility could hardly be more direct. He gave these pirates of the air his license to act with impunity against British shipping, and they made it the use one might expect.

These attacks were manifestly as deliberate as they were brutal. The plane flew low and must have recognised both the nationality of the two ships and the sign that signifies they carried international observers, whose presence on board was a guarantee that their cargoes were innocent. In fact, one of them carried wheat; the other was in ballast.

Not content with the destruction of the two vessels, the pilot turned his machine-gun on the crews.

One does not waste words. These airmen, whether they destroy Spanish homes or British vessels, act with the ruthlessness and the contempt for law that are the spirit of Fascism.

The case that calls for our attention is Mr. Chamberlain's. Why in the debate, did he reject with contempt all the suggestions for deterrent or retaliatory action, advanced by Mr. Noel-Baker, Mr. Lloyd George, and Mr. Churchill?

The only suitable retaliation would be to bombard the Italian aerodrome near Palma, preferably from the sea. Failing this, one of Franco's merchantmen should be arrested for every British ship attacked—or better still, as Mr. Churchill proposed, one of his warships.

Confronted with these suggestions, Mr. Chamberlain suddenly turns pacifist. Under no provocation will he resist. In that case let him scrap the Fleet, stop rearmament, and save our taxes.

The scandalous suggestion that British merchant ships should, at their own cost, carry anti-aircraft guns, plunges us back into the seventeenth century, when every trader went armed to cope with pirates.

What the Premier is sacrificing is one of the basic achievements of civilisation—but the sea is safe for innovators.

I saw the first aeroplanes fly violent action of some kind or I watched the Wrights in other.

* * *

Brutes Of The Air

I saw the first aeroplanes fly violent action of some kind or I watched the Wrights in other.

* * *

"Cowardly brutes," I have called the miscreants who drop bombs on cities and villages, whether these are in China, Spain, Abyssinia, or the British Empire. That description, I maintain, is entirely justified.

They are the worst kind of stab-in-the-back assassins. Unless they encounter Russian fighting planes, in which case they turn tail, they run no risk.

All nations which hire men to do this foul work are creating a debased and de-humanised type. This is the worst danger to civilisation which has appeared yet.

Seemed, too, that flying must draw human beings more closely together. It would shorten travel time. It would enable people to know one another better. They would learn to understand each other's point of view. That would make for peace and goodwill among all men.

Now I took back bitterly on those early days of flying, and my far-too-hopeful anticipations. I see that this invention was accursed. I hate the sight of aeroplanes when I see them flying in military formation. If a word of mine could destroy every plane that exists, and prevent any more being built, I would gladly speak it.

For civilisation means good citizenship. It means being kindly, helpful, considerate, to all. It means trying to see the other fellow's point of view, and to consider his interest as well as your own.

Many of us are muddle-headed enough to think we are civilised because we have electric light and telephone and the radio and votes and county councils. These are but the trimmings of civilisation.

We could dispense with them all, wear no clothes to speak of, eat the simplest foods, live in mud huts, and yet be highly civilised, if we behaved like savages.

That Rule—treat others as you would like them to treat you, if you were in their place, and they were in yours—is being more openly flaunted just now, than it has been for a long time.

We seemed to be getting—superficially, at least—more civilised. Now we are being flung back into ruthless barbarism.

And I still think we ought to break off intercourse with the nations which have renounced civilisation. Not with the Governments only. With all who support, or even tolerate, such rulers.

I know this means hardship for many. Such hardship ought not to be inflicted save as a last resort.

But if it means preventing hardship, death, terror pain, bereavement to Chinese and Spaniards who look to us for help—and in all probability to ourselves—it seems to me necessary.

If a man commits a horrible crime, we do not wait to make his family suffer for it. But if they want to defend and applaud it, they must share his obloquy.

We must do something to show our loathing for mass murder.

Under No Provocation?

cent ships. He might as well be to admit that his own judgment each of us carry a gun to deal with gangsters when we take a country walk on Sunday.

PRESSURE ON FRANCE

If by the destruction of British steamers the Republic can so far realated a peculiarly impudent demand from Rome.

Realising that the gallantry of the Republican troops may prolong the war for many a month yet, Mussolini asked that the Anglo-Italian Agreement should come into force at once. His conquest of Abyssinia was to be recognised de jure, and the door opened to the London money market.

As much by what it avoids doing as by what it actually does, British policy is hastening the end. By pressure on Paris (as yet, the "Times" frankly reports), it

No one knows what this vague word "settlement" means, and Mr. Chamberlain has stubbornly refused to define it.

Does it mean the return of peace to the Spanish Peninsula, and the end, however it may come, of the Civil War? Does it mean the complete withdrawal, as promised in the Agreement, of all Anglo-Italian troops and material from Spain? Or is it enough, as Roman diplomacy contends, that Italy should give her full assent to the paper plans of the London Committee?

DUKE INSISTS

Clearly, if he is to retain any measure of respect within his own circle, Mr. Chamberlain must produce evidence of something that looks like compliance from the Italians.

It is not forthcoming yet. They were approached, it seems, by the ever hopeful Foreign Office with a request that they should buck some British scheme for an armistice to be following by mediation.

For a few days Fleet Street, under official guidance, wrote cheerfully about the prospects of this plan. The "Times" correspondent in Rome bluntly swept it away.

Mussolini insists, as from the first he has insisted, that for him the only possible end to his invasion of Spain must be the unconditional victory for Fascism and the destruction of the democratic Republic.

He might, it is said, consent to withdraw perhaps 10,000 of his infantry, if this would satisfy the public opinion which even Mr. Chamberlain has to consider.

The Italian infantry is the least of the advantages which the Dictator has bestowed on Franco. It has every mechanical advantage, but in soldierly qualities it is probably inferior to France's Moorish and Spanish levies.

There may be as many as 80,000 Italians—the Duke himself himself admitted to 40,000—but it is not the infantrymen who matter. The key men are the technical troops, the tank crews, the artillerymen, above all, the airmen.

These will remain, the skilled, highly-trained craftsmen of war, while the more cannon fodder are reduced in numbers.

The German troops in Spain are entirely in this class. They are the technical troops, the practised organisers, who have won for Franco all his successes.

FRONTIER CLOSED

After spending a year on the elaboration of a paper plan for the withdrawal of foreign combatants from Spain, the London Committee has at least finished its job. A volume of 70 pages lies on its table, and there is not one foreign soldier the fewer in Spain. If it works, the infantry will depart, but the technicians will remain.

Two months will elapse before its tightened controls begin to function. They do not apply to the air, which remains free and unhampered for the arrival of fresh planes. But meanwhile, since early June, the French frontier has been hermetically sealed.

3RD DAY'S PLAY

W.A. Brown's Brilliant Test Feat

His Double Century Not Grudged

C.V. Grimmett's Absence Keenly Felt

Lord's Ground, June 27. The day did not begin well. I tried to bring one-fifth of the M.C.C. matches, of which I am about a one seven-thousand part proprietor. I was compelled to disgorge them. The legal position is complex and acute.

Unfortunately I cannot bring the cricket match here to-day and present it to England. The happy thought is that up to date it has been a genuine cricket match, worthy of the headquarters of the game.

As we stand, and we enjoyed the pull of winning the toss, the position is about quits as regards the runs made. Manifestly quick wickets this morning would give us a fine chance; but again quick wickets for Australia in our second innings might readjust relations, and offer Australia a chance.

The umpires say that there is nothing the matter with the pitch; it is still sound. But we have a muffled sky, and the light is grey. A fresh south-westerly wind is truly rumpling the big Union Jack above the pavilion; there is rain in the air.

Neither side has this match in its pocket. All things are possible.

Ames Without ERROL' The first event is a sharpish push by Billy Brown, which sends up the ball, and leaves 45 runs to save the follow. Barnes in the bowler—(Pavilion end).

At the other end we have Verity; the idea being that at left-handed Barnett the rough made by the feet of the other bowlers may give him a chance. And it was so; Barnett missed an on-drive, and skied an easy-swinging but unpleasant catch, collected on the run by Compton. Total 307 for six out; Chippingfield the next man.

This guy batsman has a split finger; he prepared his bat with hand twirl after the manner of John Hobbs. He is good at a pinch.

Nobody has said anything much about Ames in this match, except as a batsman. He has kept wicket as usual in quietude, with nose-like hands without error.

Verity induced Chippingfield at once to walk plumb in front. A manifest blow. I would emphasize that the full grey light of these Northern islands does not favour Australian eyes.

I am sure they find difficulty in locating the ball. *

The light is weak; in the late afternoon an appeal would be no surprise.

O'Reilly is trying to treat Verity in a bad bowler with various results. Two fine drives and several bouncings of the air.

As for Billy Brown, he offers no sign of not carrying his bat through the innings. Except that Barnes has hit him fairly often on the pads and fired a few rises past his off stump, he has presented a composed indifference to all our bowlers; an innings of excellent merit. By now he has been cheered for his 150.

It is an coincidence that the two most successful batsmen in this match are both automobile specialists in private life. By now O'Reilly is taking sundry huge liftings out of Verity; one of them a possible running catch to long-on, who did not see the ball soon enough against the dark background of the pavilion.

Verity Hit For Sixes

O'Reilly hits firm-footed with a terrific lunge; one bounces one hears his whistle when he misses the ball; and when it does not, one can actually hear a most resounding thump.

* * *

The follow-on is avenged. O'Reilly is becoming terrible; he keeps on hitting Verity for sixes.

Why not put on a fast bowler instead of Verity?

Verity is still unbroken, encouraged by the Tiger's prowess. Billy Brown is hanging boundaries.

The score is now 374, with 177 to W.A. Brown.

In stead of a fast bowler our captain tried Wright. Well, the captain knows. But O'Reilly has just led up 33 runs in no time, and only one of them off Barnes and Wellard.

Light rain is not damping down the Irish idiom of the great O'Reilly; he is just smashing his drives.

But at last Barnes, as any fast bowler was likely to do, spread-eagled his brave wicket. A gallant and glorious 42 O'Reilly dealt out and deserved his big cheer. Total 303.

As Billy Brown is now 184 and McCormick is caught first ball off Barnes, and Xavier alone remains, the double century due to Billy Brown is in danger.

* * *

Xavier at once offers Barnes his "hat-trick"; catch to second slip, but second slip dislodged. The ball was travelling, but should have been dead.

The weather also dislodged, and the game yielded to a frail drifting rain.

I Knew It

The frail rain has thickened now into a sweeping and continuous flow.

Prospects are not good.

I knew something would go wrong when I failed to secure those matches. And again when my carefully reserved seats in Block A were courteously collared by some fellow members of M.C.C.

One spends most of one's time at Lord's rescuing distressed relatives.

* * *

After the rain had once set in we sat down one and all, some in the web, some in the sepulchral parlour of the covered stands, to discuss prospects.

What will the rain do to the wicket? What will be the effect on the game?

At Lord's one can never say. Sometimes such rain as this takes a long time to do more to the turf than spread a film of slime over the surface, while the substance of the pitch remains hard. Rather like a piece of chocolate someone has sucked and abandoned.

* * *

Sometimes, however, the aerial wetness joins up with the moisture, always intent not many inches below the surface of a well-prepared pitch; and then you have what we call a mud wicket.

If the rain goes on, to-morrow will see a mud wicket and a lead of even 50 runs will be of value.

* * *

The ground is semi-deserted by half-past two. Most of the friends of members who this morning were busy poring one another's aunts

C. B. FRY SAYS--

C. B. Fry, internationally-known authority on cricket, is writing a series of commentaries on the five Test Matches between England and Australia exclusively for the "China Mail" and "Sunday Herald."

We publish below Fry's account of the third and fourth day's play at Lord's. The first and second day's play were contained in the edition of the "Sunday Herald" of July 3 and "China Mail" of July 4.

AUSTRALIA were 290 runs for 5 wickets in reply to ENGLAND's FIRST INNINGS TOTAL OF 492 when W. A. Brown 140 not out and H. A. Barnett 6 not out, resumed their innings on June 27.

4TH DAY'S PLAY

We Set The Australians A Big Task

Thanks Chiefly To Denis Compton

McCormick Reaches His 100 In No Balls

ENGLAND were two for 39 when Verity 6 not out and Edrich 6 not out resumed their second innings against AUSTRALIA, England then being 111 runs in the lead.

Lord's Ground, June 28.

Both retrospectively and prospectively this great cricket match is permeated with "if" and "but."

If had held every possible catch, we should have started our second innings with enough runs in hand to go out boldly for a win; or might have sent our opponents in again and used ourselves the somewhat trencherous wicket of the late afternoon and evening.

On the other hand we must not forget that catches in the deep field at Lord's are hard to see.

One does see the batsman's stroke, but one may misjudge the catch at the start through not seeing the ball clearly till it is at the top of its flight. That, I feel sure, is what happened twice yesterday.

As for the catch missed in the slips, which lost McCormick his "hat-trick," the sufferer himself says that it was a difficult catch, the more so as the ball blazed first and second slips.

There are other points constituting a pretty hangover from yesterday; but they are only useful for conversation.

I must say, however, that I have a general feeling that, having scored 40 runs at Lord's, we had a fine chance of securing an impregnable position, with odds on winning.

We did somehow let the occasion slip. What struck me is that good and bad bowling is, it does just lack the decisive quality; we get so far and then we cannot drive our advantage home.

Caught At Short-leg

From the first over of the day, bowled by O'Reilly to Verity, we learn nothing; a harmless maiden harmlessly accepted.

The second over from McCormick (Pavilion end) is a renewal of bash-bowling—quite legitimate, of course.

The ball nearly bashed Edrich's head; Edrich bashed a rising long hop to square leg, and then he bashed a similar ball into the chest of short-leg.

So the total is 48 for 3, and we are 116 runs on.

It looks as if McCormick will be able to bump for an hour or so; and after that the wicket, bar rain, will quite dry up, and this prospect does not at all suit us.

You must please realize that variations of the state of the wicket, once rain has interfered with the match, are the crucial factors.

But if we lose this match you will not read here any excuses for England.

We had our chance.

There is no excuse either for the kind of chairs in the grandstand boxes; they are suitable only sideways, and then with discomfort.

This was a very bad mistake; so unnecessary. What is one run worth at this stage of the game? And Paynter was as well set and going so strongly.

4TH DAY'S PLAY

WE SET THE AUSTRALIANS A BIG TASK

Total 128 for 9 men out.

At ten minutes before the interval we see O'Reilly doing his utmost to bother Compton and Ames into folly, and we see McCormick doing his utmost to bomb them into an accident.

* * *

Five minutes to go, and as yet neither folly nor accident. Compton is now quite his Middlesex self; and Ames is subjecting the bowlers to a leisurely inquest.

The ball over from McCormick is a mixture of knuckle-busters and chin-shavers. But young Compton succeeds in escaping disaster. In fact, he did this with an appearance of disdainful confidence in the middle of his bat. So we have 142 runs on the board, and lead by 214 runs, four wickets in hand.

We had promised ourselves better things.

NOW ALL IS DOUBTFUL

It is difficult to gauge how far our poor total is really due to any assistance the wicket gave the bowlers.

But we do grudge that run out of Paynter by Paynter. He was on the edge of putting us right, for the edge of the afternoon.

Now all is doubtful.

* * *

After luncheon, we contemplate a pitch which now looks dry and brown.

The first over renders us sadder by the sight of Leslie Ames caught at slip, very smartly caught by McCabe off O'Reilly.

* * *

Compton is in play and that is our best hope of a lead of 250.

Can it be that the wicket is playing worse than we think? I hope not.

Wellard, I believe, is as a batsman a gambler; if he keeps up 80 runs I shall regard him as having earned his place as a bowler.

* * *

To Hit Or Miss

Thanks to several firm drives by Compton we pass our 150.

Wellard will either hit McCormick or miss him; and he is more likely to hit a straight than a crooked ball. I do not fancy him at O'Reilly's carefully graded temptations; but he has earned a huge pull with success.

* * *

Now for some fun. O'Reilly has retired in favour of Fleetwood, and Wellard is the batsman.

Wellard has hit the air very hard twice. Then he connects at some point in the circle of his swing. He is careful to take his eye well off the ball.

O'Reilly has not retired; he has simply changed ends and relieved McCormick.

This enables Compton to complete a most marvellous 50 with a proper leg hit; a neat swinger. So the total is 178, and we are 250 runs on.

This is better. Moreover, Wellard's circular saw is connecting, eye or no eye on the ball.

What has saved our situation is the complete competence of Denis Compton.

* * *

Wellard is rapidly justifying his inclusion; but good bowler as he is, I liked his rude swipe better than his stylish back play. His back play gives one the needle.

We are on the verge of 200, and Wellard has cracked it up with a fine pulled drive off McCabe. He holds a huge sixer next ball. What a splendid bowler! Well worth his place—even as a wicket-keeper, if you like.

* * *

38 Good Runs

Wellard has hit a colossal straight drive over McCabe's head and another straight drive over the wicket-keeper's head—the latter an example of success.

But alas our bowler misses the straight ball. He is out for an exhilarating 88 runs of golden value. Total 216; our lead 238 runs.

The undoubtably Denis has lifted us out of a first-class scrape.

We are now 303 runs ahead with three hours to play. And we have two wickets in hand.

It looks all right to you on paper now. Before Compton began to right the ship here in the open area of Lord's the prospect was breakers ahead.

* * *

At 9.20 our captain made an honourable return, giving Australia 316 runs to make in two and three-quarter hours of play.

The task is possible of accomplishment, but only by means of a tremendous feat of batmanship.

We have to thank Denis Compton for the honourable position we occupy. Paynter did a good job, but it was the counter attack delivered by the fine young Middlesex batsman that changed the face of the battle.

You have no doubt heard that Ames has gone to be X-rayed. The bash on his hand from McCormick has perhaps broken a bone.

Edward Paynter is wearing the big gloves for England.

It is Brown vs. Fingleton again to Farnham and Wellard.

The slips held by Farnham are set too deep by two yards. The natural catch is dropping at the distance our slips are standing off, and is more difficult.

Farnham is bowling well, but he does not suggest vendetta as does

G-

GOOD SWIMMING AT C.B.S. MEETING CHOCOLATE HOUSE WIN AGAIN

Cormick; he is impersonal and impeccable.

Wellard is a dark and hearty bowler; he is full of sunburnt mirth, and amacks of the countryside.

I can see no vice in the wicket. Brown and Fingleton are settling down to formal cricket.

Not, however, formal enough because Walter's graceful hand has pocketed Fingleton off Wellard. Total:

eight for one.

THE DON APPEARS

You will judge that there is a buzz on.

The Don has appeared. The Don has had his chin shaved twice by Farnes; our fast bowler has found motive; our fast bowler is making the ball bounce. The Australians prefer to see McCormick bouncing.

Wellard is bowling rather short. I want Verity. Verity, Verity now. It is 4 p.m. and the score is 24.

* * *

More hard pounding by Farnes. Billy Brown does not much like this game of bounce. He sometimes looks at short slip and plays to short leg. Better look at the ball and not expose the jaw.

I still call for Verity. Wellard is well enough; but I have a hunch about Verity at this juncture.

And again, why have a fast bowler at such end? What about contrast of peace? And who got the Don first innings?

It is at 4.17 precisely that the ball is handed to Verity. Seven minutes late on me. Now you see if something does not occur.

In due course the Don is growing busy. We see 51 on the board in 50 minutes. This leads to Wright instead of Farnes, who has had a heavy spell of bowling.

At this stage I fancy Wright and Verity. But I would have liked both to loose at the Don before his name.

He has now 38 runs to his name.

Billy Brown, who is playing a nice mid-sized innings, is not keeping with the Don, but he is keeping his wicket intact.

Unexpectedly the tea interval is obtruded. This interval may be taken as the symbol of drawn matches. The score is 60 for one man out. We say that this match is now doomed to be a draw.

LITTLE LEFT NOW

The wicket is completely brown and dry; the Don has nearly made 60 runs and has been hit on the hand.

All sorts of distinguished people from neighbouring boxes have called in asking me to promote the cause of five-day Test matches.

There is little left but a display of strokes by the Don to amuse the spectators. The score, by the way, is 71.

DON AND MCCAULEY

In a few minutes the something happened. Verity bowled Brown off his knee; Brown's knee. He had made 10 runs in about 50 minutes; Brown had.

Thus we have the Don and S. J. McCabe at the wickets together; and as now no one can win or even lose, we hope for an exhibit of strokes.

The second something happened. Verity got McCabe out. It was a forward reach and catch to second slip. The batsman changed his mind; he had made 211.

The board shows 411 for three.

The Don has 60 of this total.

Verity has a bowl. I wish he would pick up two or three quick wickets; he need not lose in this match. He has beaten the bat several times and missed the stump.

At this period the Don is engaged in one of his habitual collections of runs, some fiery strokes but no fireworks.

Wright cannot strike his length and is expensive; so we have some

Farnes, who finds the foothold too much holed out and his short balls treated hardly by the Don.

Then he comes off and Farnes fires down some of his lively drifts with quite decent accuracy of length.

The wind has risen, the clouds are dissipated and this unsatisfactory match wanders on to its close in bright sunshine.

At 6 p.m. the 150 is attained. The Don is 32 not out, set for another run. Some fiery strokes but no

OPEN RINKS QUARTER-FINALS TO-DAY - WEATHER PERMITTING

DELUGE WASHES OUT YESTERDAY'S LAWN BOWLS PROGRAMME RECREIO WELL ON WAY TO CHAMPIONSHIP

Intermittent rains throughout yesterday and a heavy downpour which commenced shortly after 4.30 p.m. and which continued until after 5 p.m. caused the Lawn Bowls League programme to be abandoned after only a few heads play, in many cases the deluge washing the scores off the boards and causing cards to be lost.

The following were the results of some of the matches up till the time they were abandoned owing to the greens being water-logged:

FIRST DIVISION

At Austin Road, Recreio were leading Kowloon Bowling Green Club by 19 shots to 8, the sixth head having been reached on two of the rinks, when play was abandoned.

At Tai Wan, the match between Kowloon Dock and Civil Service Cricket Club had just reached the end of the first head when play was abandoned, no score being available.

At the Valley, Kowloon Cricket Club were leading Police Recreation Club by 21 shots to 14, on the seventh head, when the game was abandoned.

At King's Park, the match between Crayengower Cricket Club and Indian Recreation Club was abandoned before a start could be made.

SECOND DIVISION

At the Valley, Hong Kong Football Club "B" were leading Taikeo Ducks Recreation Club by 22 shots to 12 at the seventh head, when the game was abandoned.

At the Valley, Hong Kong Football Club "A" were leading Crayengower Cricket Club by 14 shots to 11, on the sixth head, when the game was abandoned.

At the Valley, Police Recreation Club were leading Civil Service Cricket Club by 10 shots to 15 on the fifth head, when the game was abandoned.

At King's Park, Kowloon Bowling Green Club were leading Club de Recreio by 1 shot, at the seventh head.

THIRD DIVISION

At Ming Yuen, Hong Kong Electric R.C. were leading Kowloon Football Club 12 shots to 7, the fifth head being reached on one of the rinks, when play was abandoned.

At Causeway Bay, rain washed out the match between Yacht Club and Football Club "C", no scores being available.

At the Valley, Kowloon Tong's home match against Crayengower, which was scheduled for the Valley because of the Al Fresco Cabaret, was abandoned before start could be made.

McGOWAN v. DALLAH THE TIT-BIT

(By "SKIP")

THIS Open Pairs and Rinks having, thanks to the weather, made such excellent progress, a start will be made to-morrow in the Colony Lawn Bowls Singles Championship. Out of 108 entries, 20 players have received a bye into the next round, whilst 44 matches are to be played during the next ten days—weather permitting.

Until some of the lesser lights (I've learnt my lesson about calling them "rabbits") are eliminated, the interest will not be so intense, but on the other hand, it will be noticed that some excellent games are down for decision.

Commencing with to-morrow's games, the best at the Police Club will be that between J. F. McGowan and A. R. Dallah, both First Division skips, although the latter has only recently been promoted.

It will be a very close game and I hesitate to nominate the winner. M. R. Abbas and F. Channing should provide the best match of a rather uninteresting series, at the Civil Service Club, with the odds slightly in favour of the I. R. C. entrant.

GOOD GAMES AT RECREO
W. J. Burling and J. F. V. Ribeiro should provide the best game at Tai Koo, with the latter winning by half a dozen shots or so, whilst there are a couple of good games down for decision at Club de Recreio for the Kowloon enthusiasts. The game between L. Jack and D. W. Waterton is one of those to which I refer, whilst J. S. Logan and H. Overy is the other one. In each case I think the latter player should win.

Two club-mates in C. R. Recreio and J. J. Basto meet at Kowloon Bowling Green Club and the first-named, a former Shanghai champion, should emerge the winner.

The Open Pairs game between E. W. Lines and Duncan and N. Mitchell and J. C. Brown will incidentally, also be concluded on this green the same evening.

TIGHT STRUGGLE

B. Basto, also a Club de Recreio entrant, should have a tight struggle with Glen Cooper of Kowloon Dock, and may emerge the winner by a narrow margin. This is also at Austin Road, whilst on the Kowloon Dock green, G. H. Basto and G. Perkins should provide a most interesting exhibition.

Other good matches in this round are F. V. V. Ribeiro v. J. McElveen, at Kowloon Cricket Club, on Tuesday, R. F. da Luz v. J. S. Howell, at the K. H. G. C. on July 19; John Watson v. C. S. Rosselot, at Football Club, the same evening and C. Dowman v. S. Randle, at Crayengower, the next day.

THE DRAW

FOUR PORTUGUESE QUARTETTES BUT NONE WILL MEET!

Fraser And C.G. Silva's Rinks In Main Feature BOWLING GREEN CLUB FOUR HAVE TOUGH NUT TO CRACK

(By "SKIP")

THE quarter-finals of the Open Rinks Lawn Bowls Competition take place this afternoon, weather permitting, and what will probably be the best game will be featured at Austin Road where Joe Fraser's rink clash with C. G. Silva's men. Both rinks have had a difficult passage to the quarter-finals.

Fraser's four beat rinks skipped by Bob Duncan and Eddie Souza, while his opponent had victories over Ernie Zimmerman and Walter Gill's rinks.

Mulcahy, in lead, should have the mat more often than his opponent, but Tom Carr will have to be at his best, which can be expected on occasion, to hold C. A. Lopez who is a steady and experienced player.

Jackie Noronha, although playing out of position, will have the edge on Willy Greig, and this may prove the key to the result, as one could find in any two players, should prove even in effectiveness. I anticipate a victory for the Portuguese four and will make no bold say to say they may win by five or six shots.

WILL BE GOOD GAME

A good game should eventually see J. G. Moyer's Bowling Green rink meet F. X. Silva's Recreio four. With the scalps of both Teddy Fischer and U. M. Omar to their credit, the Portuguese four will start easy, favourites and should not let Carrillo, the hope of the Kowloon Bowling Green Club, have revealed fighting qualities in both their previous games, they cannot expect to win at Kowloon Dock to-day.

A close game should be witnessed when the Civil Service green between the Club de Recreio and the Police Club rinks skiped by B. Basto will be held by Tom Carr, the skipper of the present holders, Charlie Rascals' four, then eliminated "Wally" Mair's Police Club rink—two excellent performances and rather more impressive than Carr's victories over Brookbank and Areuil.

BETTER AT DRAWING

McLeod and Joe Luz should be equal to each other, as opposing leads, whilst Cameron and "Doc" Gartes should also be evenly matched with the balance slightly in the former's favour. The same applies to Ted Post and F. X. Soares, the left-hander being slightly more brilliant when drawing a critical shot than the Portuguese exponent.

Regarding the skips, there is little in it. I imagine Basto is possibly

To provide modern, safe food-keeping facilities at lowest cost in 34 low-rent housing projects in 20 cities, the Housing Division of the U.S. Public Works Administration late in 1936 called for sealed bids from leading refrigerator manufacturers. Bids were based on initial price added to cost of electricity for ten years. Westinghouse won . . . though four other manufacturers quoted lower unit prices. Low current consumption made possible by Westinghouse features, convinced Government buyers that on a 10-year basis it costs less to own a Westinghouse.

SHORT STORY

TYPE: Frustrated ambition
SETTING: A train and a country vicarage
AUTHOR: Allan Seagar

ROGER Kilbourne had a bad head. The shaking of the train did not help the pounding in his skull, and still less the thought that he had made a mess of his three months' leave, and, for that matter, of his life.

It would be his life unless he pulled himself together and had the thing annulled, or something legal done to it.

The view from the compartment window gave him no solace although he had long looked forward to seeing it again.

It was remarkably the same as he remembered it, and duller — the same mist, same little fields fenced with stone and hedgerows, here and there a row of pollards.

He turned his head and surveyed his new wife with distaste. She was pretty enough, smiling at him, but there was too much rouge, too much lipstick, and he could not deceive himself about the cockney echo in her voice. It would not do to inquire too closely, or he might learn that the wife of his bosom had been some one's second maid. He was a fool to have married her, and on three days' acquaintance.

Kilbourne had gone down from Cambridge to take a banking job in the Sudan. At the time he had felt what he was certain was the exhilaration of the Empire builders, somewhat watered down, to be sure, since there were no longer any warlike niggers down there.

But the excitement had worn off in three years of routine drudgery, and he had become addicted to gin and old copies of illustrated magazines. He wrote to his mother every day, fearful, at the beginning of his stay, that the gin might show in the writing, but gradually the fear disappeared as he got used to it. He was fond of his mother, and he wanted, most of all, to get back to her.

He had, as a little boy, played in the garden, and she had come one day and knelt in front of him and taken him by the shoulders and looked into his eyes a long time. Then she had begun to cry, and she had murmured in a choked voice, "Oh, my darling boy," and she had embraced him tightly.

It was this mood of trust—and compassion, really, since he felt that she had been somehow unhappy—that he tried to recapture in his letters. In them he was always careful to send his love to "dear old dad." Dear old dad was a country vicar.

At the end of his three-year term in the Sudan Kilbourne was given the usual three months' leave. He hurried to London, counting every hour on the way, and directly he landed sent his mother a telegram, saying that he would come down on the late train that night.

He was glad to be back, and he spent the afternoon strolling through the City. He ordered two suits from his tailor, and bought a number of neckties in the Burlington-arcade.

It did not occur to him to ring up any of his friends because he was saving the story of his Sudanese adventures, for his mother; not that they were very exciting, and she had read about them in his letters anyway, but they seemed to belong first to her.

After a lavish dinner enlivened by a bottle of claret and followed by a fine brandy he thought it might be fun to take a walk up Piccadilly until time for his train. He drank a beer at one of the bars out of sentiment, since he had once been thrown out of it after a Varsity match while he was still at Cambridge.

Then he began to walk up towards Leicester-square, doffing in the firm English faces of the crowd in the red and blue reflections of the electric signs.

Her face was a healthy red, and her plump cheeks were curtained gaped a moment at a movie palace, by fringes of grey, bobbed hair. She wore a camel's hair sweater. The music of a jazz band led him into the dining room, and her feet were flat-heeled shoes thought it might be pleasant to sit with a single strap across the instep.

He held a hand-glass to her lips . . . rang for the maid. She came, gave a little scream . . .

The Mesdames Kilbourne

"Your father is in the study, Roger," she said.

Roger hurried into the stuffy little room and shook hands morosely with his father. The two men returned to the living room, and Mrs. Kilbourne took Alice by the arm, saying to the vicar,

"Henry, this is Roger's wife."

It was all done quietly, and it was very painful for everyone, except, it seemed, the vicar. He took his glasses out of a case, squinted through them and said jocosely, "Why, you're very pretty, my dear." He kissed her on the cheek and led her to a couch before the fire, and began conversation with her.

Mrs. Kilbourne, hearing the cockney taint in Alice's voice, and marking the rouge and the cheap clothes, saw immediately that it was not loss she was suffering.

LARGEST SALT OF ANY LIVERVIGORING SALT IN THE WORLD

You Are Old Father William

BY WALWYN

WRITERS almost always disappoint their readers who see them in the flesh. They tend as a body to be unimpressive.

I dare say there was quite a mass of disappointment, the other night, when the largest number of writers ever known appeared on a London platform at one time went to the Queen's Hall to say in a dozen ways that writers as such are anti-Fascist.

Seven writers spoke. Only one spoke of English literature, and he was a Frenchman.

Louis Aragon, in his early '30's, but greying slightly, tall with an introverted air, quoted Shelley in stumbling English (while two poets on the platform asked their neighbours where the quotation came from, and apparently weren't quite sure).

Aragon was once a leader of the surrealists. He went to prison for a few days when he published his first volume of non-surrealist (or shall I say realist?) poetry. It was said he had threatened M. Blum in his verses. He writes songs, novels and helps run a Paris evening newspaper.

G.B.S. AND FASCISM

It was left to the Frenchman in a meeting which entitled itself "Writers and Freedom," to invoke Shelley and Byron, and to add to those names, Ralph Fox.

He saw Britain with a shrewd eye and ended with a quotation from Lewis Carroll to describe our heaviest right-wing newspapers and the old men they speak of as a body to be unimpressive.

You are old, Father William, the young man said,

And your hair has become very white,

And yet you incessantly stand on your head—

Do you think at your age it is right?

I concluded that through Aragon's broken-English the real tradition of English literature was emerging more clearly than did some of his co-speakers.

He was witty about a conspicuous absence. "We do not know," he said, "whether Mr. Bernard Shaw is against Fascism. That is free, and Central Europe, though one of the secrets of Olympus, it does not include, thank God, Czechoslovakia!"

NOBLE INDIGNATION

There were one or two pointers to the way opinion is swinging. The fact that Sir Hugh Walpole, who said he was neither anti-Fascist nor anti-Communist, developed a noble indignation against attempts to change any country's system of government from the outside, and against such things as the Fascists' treatment of Freud, gave me a glow of local pride in a fellow Lakesider whose works I have not been able to read.

History had a moment of dialectic. Philip Gouldall compared the world in 1838 with the world to-day, in its state of freedom and That's a pointer, too.

The audience itself was of interest. I would call it typical of the world in 1838 with the world well have been a B.B.C. concert. That's a pointer, too.

THE MESDAMES KILBOURNE

but insult, Roger had insulted her. He had married a shop-girl, or worse.

All her life-long disappointment that her husband lacked a bosphorus swelled within her, and all the high ambition she had cherished for Roger in her husband's stead was extinguished the minute Alice opened her mouth. A shop-girl, or worse Mrs. Kilbourne looked Roger in the eye, and he rose dutifully.

"You will excuse me if I speak to Roger?" she said to the couch. They left the room and presently they were heard climbing the stairs.

* * *

Alice looked at her father-in-law in the firelight. He was a meek little man, somewhat dirty, with a bald head and a grey fringe round it. His soiled clerical collar stood out a half-inch too large round his withered neck. Yet he had fine hands and he had been kind to her. She decided to tell him the truth. They all knew it any way.

"You know, sir, that I'm a professional dancing partner?"

"What fun! We hear the London orchestra every night over the radio, but I haven't danced, my dear—why, I haven't danced in twenty years."

"But don't you see, sir —"

"Call me dad, Alice. I am your dad, you know."

"Well—dad—I'm not for Roger really. I know it, and —"

"Why not, pray? You're a lovely girl, and strong enough for his children. And you love him, don't you?" He looked at her anxiously. "Yes, I love him all right." It was very cockney, her pronunciation, but it was sincere.

"Well, then, I shouldn't worry. Of course, it's a bit of a surprise, and Roger's mother, you see, is of a Norman family, and she would have him married to a duke's daughter if she could, but the stock needs refreshing, and I like the boy, my dear. Don't you worry?"

Roger joined them silently, and the maid brought in the tea. It was a rather special tea, with yet— he started to walk up and down—"and yet, you know"—the old man stopped and stared, through the walls themselves, she thought, and back into the heart of thirty years—"you know, Alice."

And then to Alice, "My wife, Alice, my wife. Roger's mother has hanged herself. Go to her."

"Rog," he said, "your mother has hanged herself. Go to her." And then to Alice, "My wife, Alice, my wife. Roger's mother has hanged herself. Go to her."

"Where's your mother, Roger?" his father asked.

"She'll be down presently, she said."

The vicar made himself busy among the tea things, slicing cake and pouring. Then they waited for Mrs. Kilbourne.

"Perhaps I'd better fetch her," his mother in the garden with the hollyhocks, and the compassion he had felt for her, Roger spoke softly to his mother's dead body, hanging from a scarf to an old lamp hook in the ceiling, her head with the words all his childhood on one side with the knot under his chin and the tears streaming down his face—"mother, I'll always be a stool overturned on the way home." Always."

Below, in the crook of the floor.

He cut her down swiftly and laid vicar's arm, Alice wopt.

unfreedom. In 1838, he said, there was Central Europe unfree. Even then it was under an Austrian Chancellor, that time Metternich.

Italy was unfree, and Russia. Spain in 1838 (he got a bitterly cheap laugh here) was "still fighting its Carlist war." France was balancing between freedom and unfreedom. The free United States covered little more than the Atlantic seaboard.

To-day, he sees a contrast—a free United States from coast to coast, a "free" British Commonwealth, France, Italy is still unfree, and Central Europe, "though it does not include, thank God, Czechoslovakia!"

Then there was Compton Mackenzie, white-faced, nervous, passionate, speaking as a Catholic anti-Fascist nor anti-Communist, developed a noble indignation and denouncing race persecution; Desmond MacCarthy, once Asquith's confidant, doyen of critics, impishly dividing the audience into pro-Communist and anti-Communist till Cecil Day Lewis united us again.

The audience itself was of interest. I would call it typical of the world in 1838 with the world well have been a B.B.C. concert. That's a pointer, too.

History had a moment of dialectic. Philip Gouldall compared the world in 1838 with the world to-day, in its state of freedom and That's a pointer, too.

The Proper Decision

DEAR Mr. Culbertson: When queen were with East and if I finessed and lost, the set would be doubled at a high contract, and the play develops in such a large set for the possibility of fulfilling the contract, or (b) play more safely to go down a limit of two tricks, what is the proper decision? Perhaps, if I submit a specific hand and tell you the story about it, you can answer categorically.

East, dealer. Both sides vulnerable.

2 spades Pass 4 spades Pass Pass 5 dia.

Double Pass Pass Pass

As you can well see, there are several ways to play this hand. A set of three or four, a set of one, or a fulfilment of the contract. I'd like to know what the percentages are.

"Yours truly,

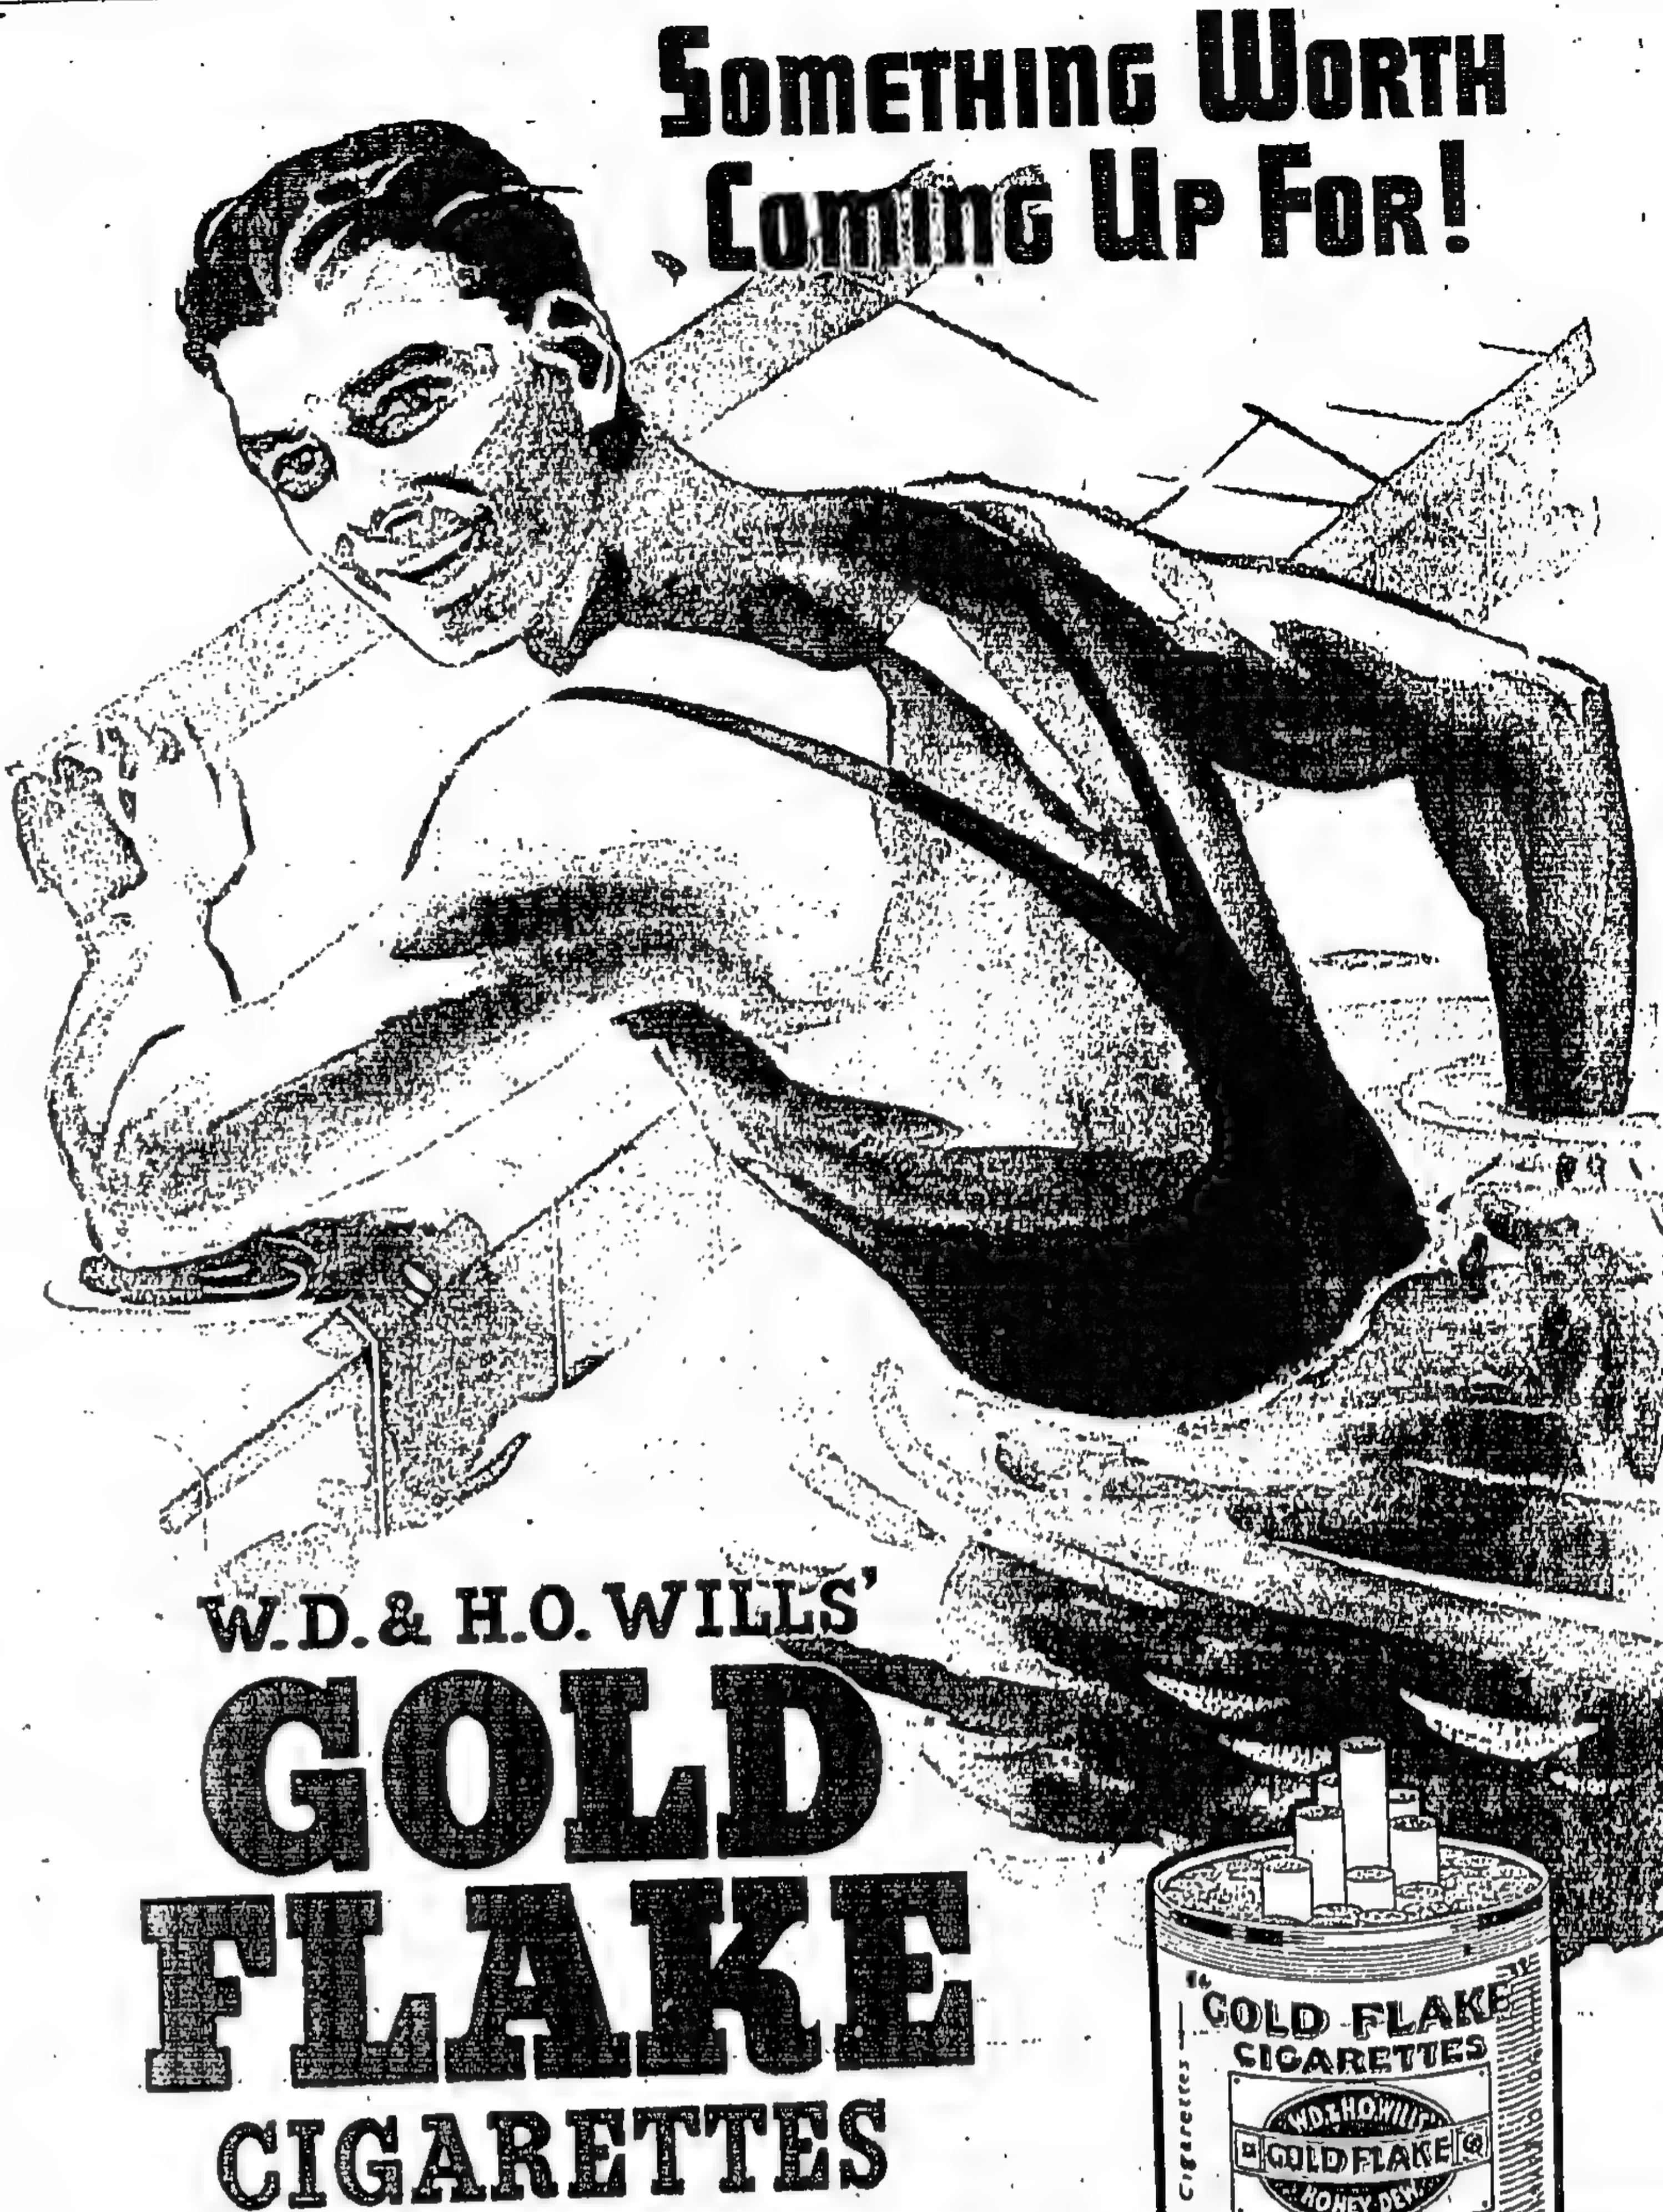

"M. U., Boston, Mass."

The question my correspondent asks is one that plagues the best players in the land. Confusing our attention especially to the above hand, and the situation involved, the proposition resolves down to this:

Declarer does not know the location of the diamond king and the heart queen. If both are right, i.e., finessable, the doubled contract is as good as made. If, however, declarer risks the heart trick, and the set will be either 800 or 1,100 points, depending on whether or not the diamond king can be captured.

While the diamond finessing remains in doubt, it would be foolish to try the heart finessing. Declarer's first play on winning the lead should be to enter dummy with a spade ruff, then to lead the diamond queen through East. Only after the king had been captured and the trump drawn should declarer ponder over the heart situation. He should figure as follows:

If the heart finessing succeeds, the contract, which is worth about 700 points, is made. If the finessing is refused in favour of trying to drop the heart queen on the third round by a ruff, thus affording a spot for one club discard, the penalty can be no less than 200 points and, if the heart queen refuses to drop, 500 points, a mean of 350 points. Finally, if the heart finessing is tried without success, the penalty becomes 800 points. Comparing these figures, we see that declarer has only an additional 450 points to lose above the mean of 350, whereas he has 700 points to gain. Obviously, "percentages" favours the finessing. Of course, these calculations leave out the possibility that the heart queen may drop doubleton in East's hand. This possibility seems remote because what we know about East's distribution, which included only one diamond and, very likely only three spades.

THIE prize of $25 for the June Competition "Pets" goes to Mr. H. McKay for his study entitled "A Bunch of Mischief". This picture was reproduced in our issue of June 26th and represented four young puppies just emerging into the sunlight. A jolly snap, and from every view point a real prize winner!

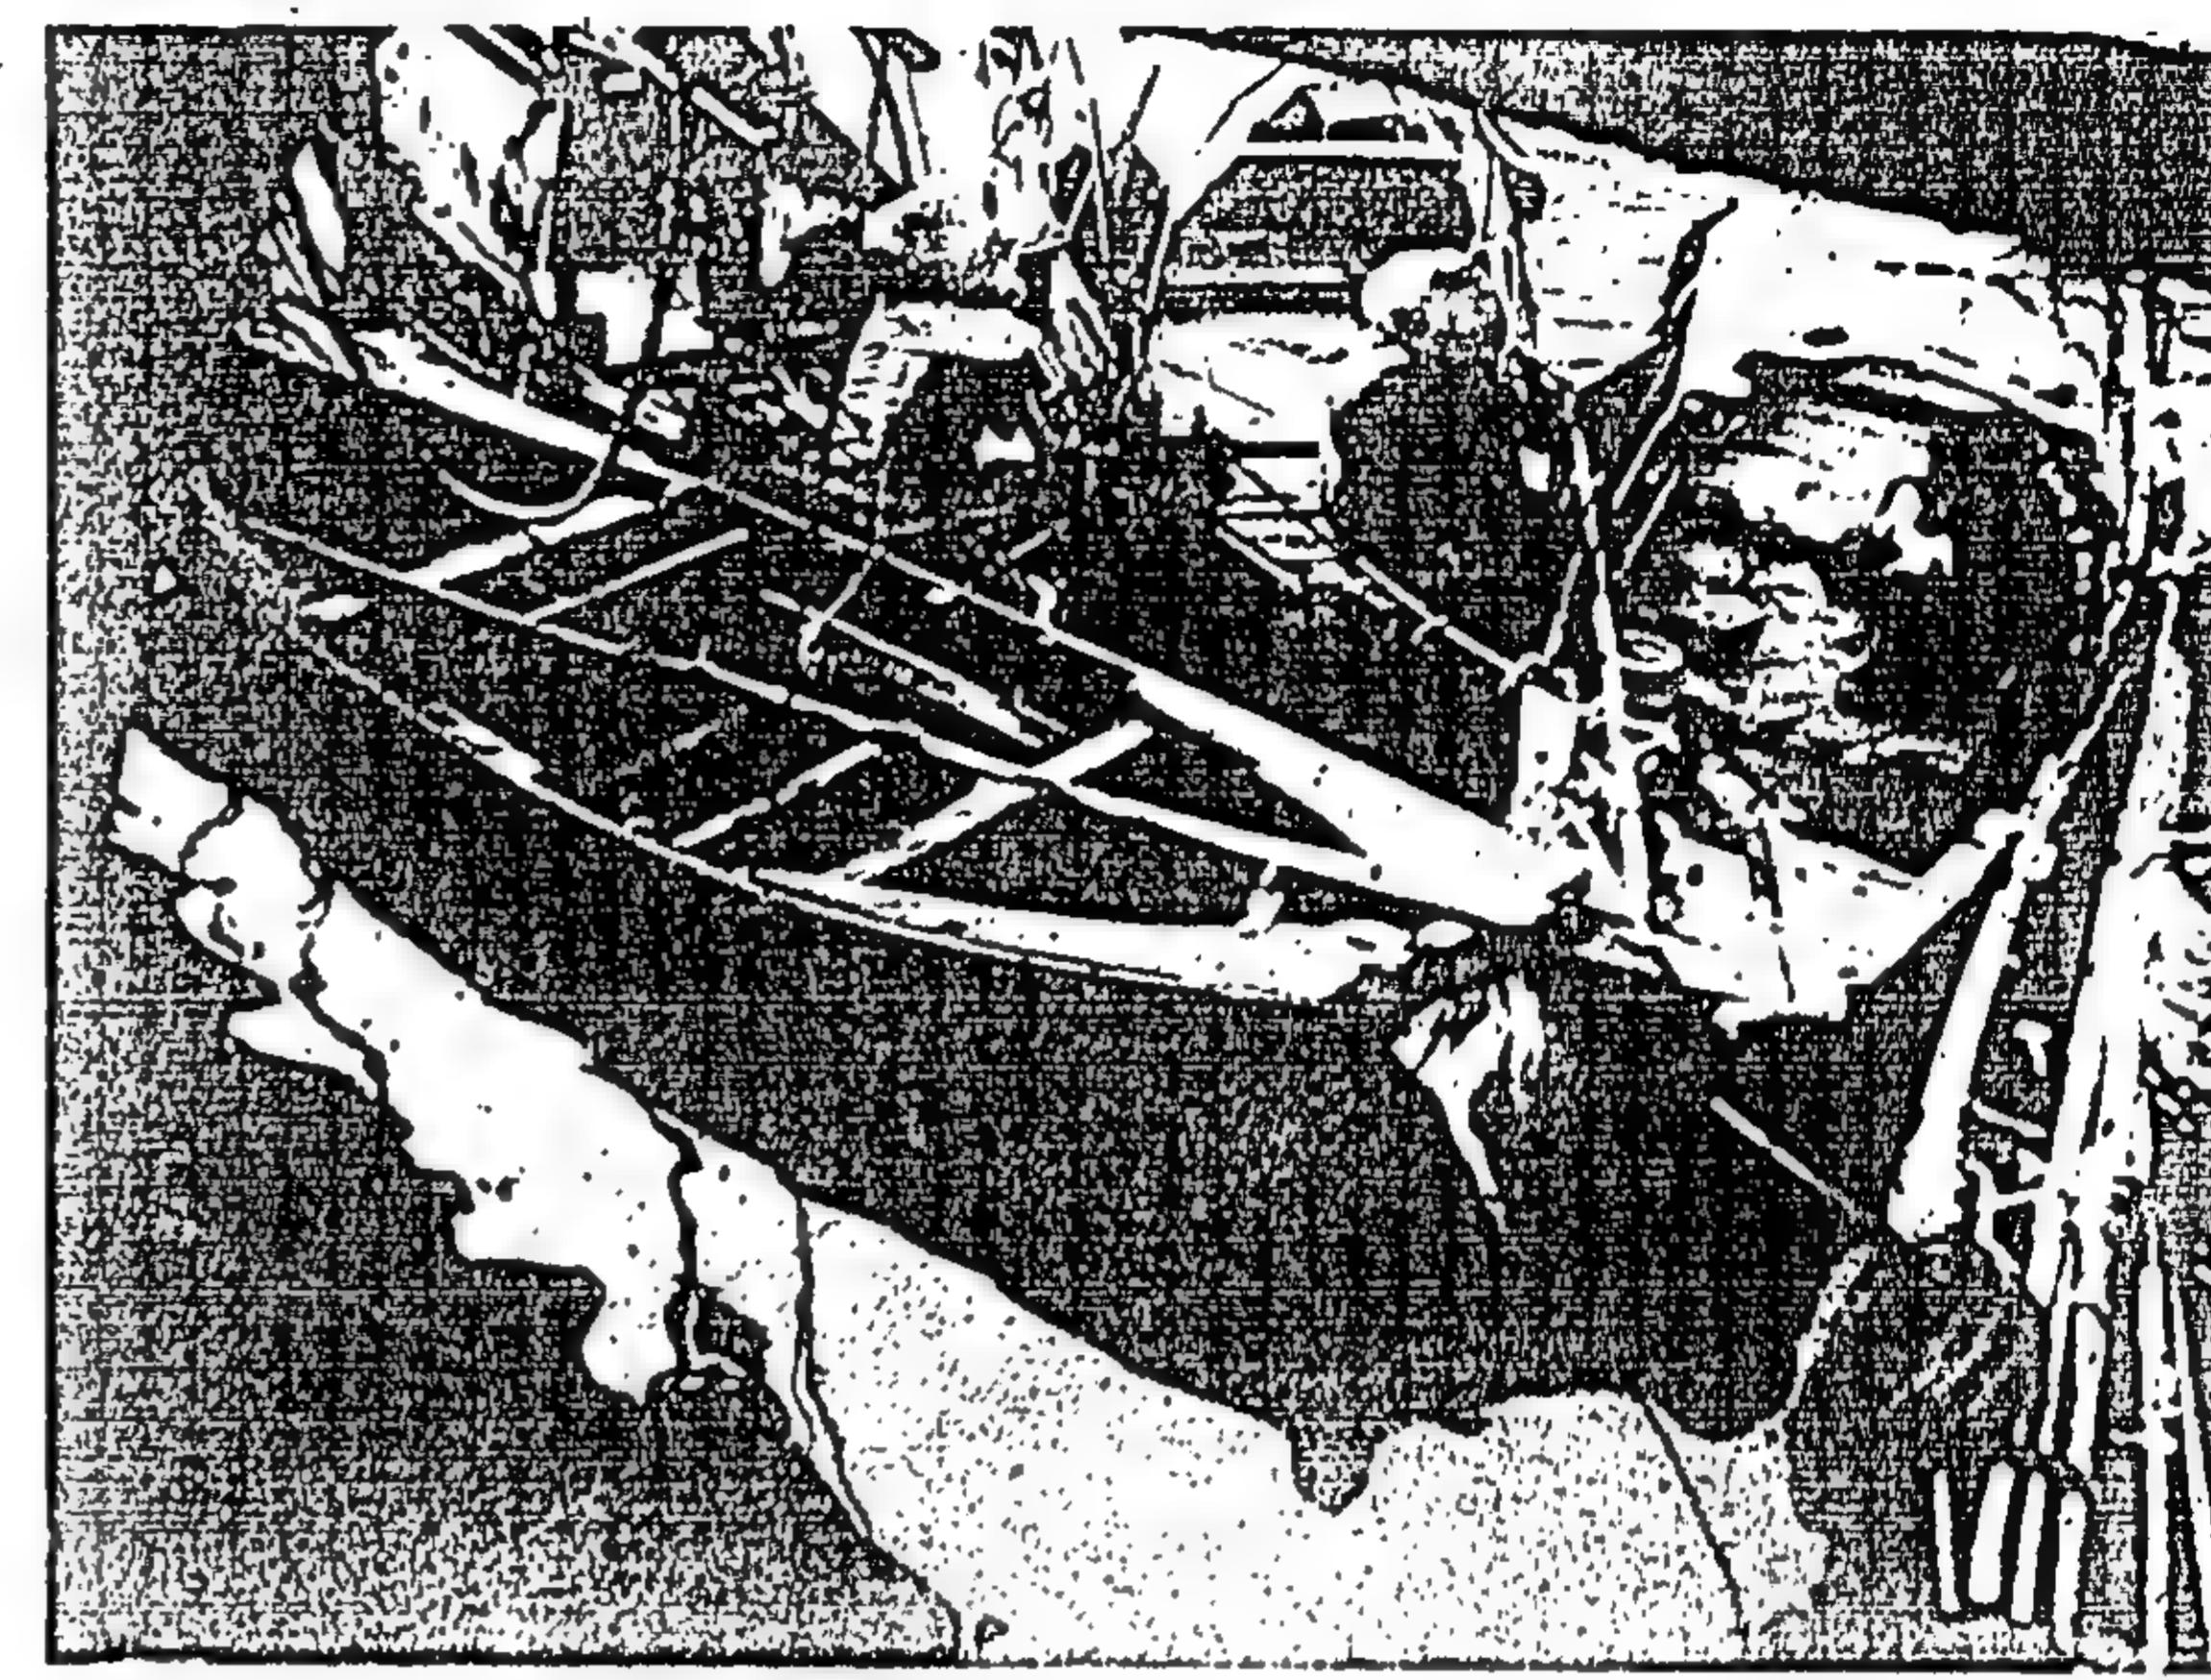

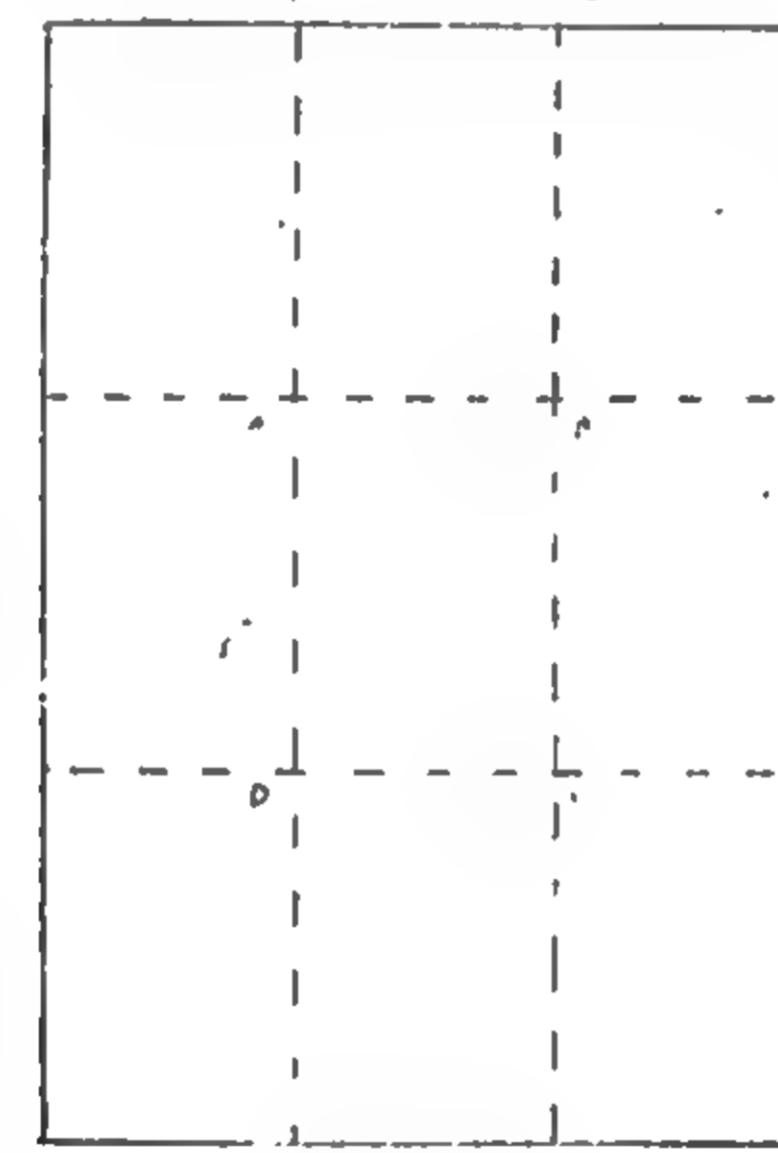

To all unsuccessful contestants, I wish them better luck in our present competition "Boat Life".

ENTRIES
Several entries for the "Pets" Competition were received too late. They are being returned to their owners. The coupon on this page should be enclosed with your entries, but it is not necessary to paste a coupon on the back of each picture as an entry can consist of as many pictures as is desired, -- provided they come from one person.

One other point. Don't form the impression that because your camera is merely a five-dollar box you cannot enter for our contests. This page is run purely for the novice and is designed to help him by showing him the best pictures and why they are best.

EXPERIMENTS

Don't be afraid to experiment with your camera. I could sit here for ten years rattling off rules and formulae and what not to do, but my advice to you is,—

"TANGLE" By C. J. Smith.

face of all this you might say—"Well, what makes a good picture?" Almost anything—yes, almost anything—from drain-pipes to cloud effects, kitchen studies to nude composition, anything will produce a good picture providing two simple rules are adhered to. The first and the greatest is simplicity. Simplicity means nothing more or less than including whatever it was that made you click the shutter and leaving everything else out. The second rule concerns composition. Take a pencil and paper and draw an oblong. Now divide each side into thirds and draw lines vertically and horizontally to join these points. A diagram is shown on this page but I would recommend you to draw it for yourself as it will impress you more. Where the lines intersect, that is A B C D, are the strong points of a picture and the lines themselves are called chords of third... In every successful picture be it photography, painting or woodcut, the main interest lies on these points or along these lines.

How do we apply this rule? Suppose we have to take a picture

Some Good Things For The Apple Lover

"Constipation is his trouble, or I'm much mistaken."

"A healthy boy should be full of fun, skyarking with the others; but when I see a child moping alone I know that what is wanted is 'California Syrup of Figs' to put the stomach right and cleanse the system."

"Give children a weekly dose of 'California Syrup of Figs' and you'll rarely have this trouble with them. It keeps them regular and healthy, and then they're bound to be happy."

"Safe? You're wise to ask that. Some mothers are too ready to experiment with cheap and drastic preparations, not realizing the danger. Take my advice and give the children 'California Syrup of Figs.' Doctors recommend it and give it to their own children. We nurses swear by it."

"Send to the drug store and get a bottle. Give Bobby a dose tonight and he'll be as fit as a fiddle in the morning. Wait till you taste 'California Syrup of Figs,' Bobby. It's simply delicious."

"Be sure to get the genuine 'California Syrup of Figs.'

WHOEVER heard of apple

soup or apple savoury? Have you ever thought that it would be possible to have an entire dinner, with every course based on apples, so many apple recipes are there?

One glance at the following recipes will prove this to be no idle statement for here is your dinner of six courses from soup, fish and entree to meat, sweet and savoury.

These recipes have been selected from the vast collection which Imperial Airways' catering department have gathered on their world wide flights and have all been included, at different times, in the very cosmopolitan meals served on their airliners flying to Europe and on Empire routes to Africa, India and Singapore and Australia.

Imperial Airways are in a unique position to gather original recipes for their system of catering necessities direct contact with the world's leading chefs; as they pick up their meals from the world's best known hotels.

These chefs have all got their best apple recipes, from Russia and Denmark in the far north of Europe, to France and Italy in the sunny south, from the tropical regions of India and Africa to countries as far east as Malaya. They are simple to make and consist of ingredients which every kitchen would stock.

From Russia comes the recipe for apple soup which is equally delicious served hot or cold.

Soup. Apple soup requires six large apples, 1 bottle of claret, the juice of 1 lemon, 2 tablespoons of sugar, 1 tablespoon of blackcurrant jelly, a few strips of lemon rind and a little cinnamon and breadcrumbs.

Pare and core the apples, slice them and put in a saucepan of boiling water with a little cinnamon, the lemon rind and 2 tablespoons of white breadcrumbs. When the apples are quite tender, rub them through a sieve into a basin. When cold, pour the claret over them add the lemon juice, the sugar, the blackcurrant jelly, previously melted, and a good pinch of cinnamon.

Fish. They call this halibut apple and it is very simple. One large apple, halibut (or any white fish obtainable) and seasoning is all that is required.

Divide the fish into slices. Steam or bake until practically cooked. Peel and slice apple about one inch in thickness. Place fish on apple slices. Bake in oven until apple is cooked. Remove from oven and serve with Shrimp Sauce.

The Shrimp Sauce for this dish is made by mixing the following ingredients into 1/2 pint of white sauce, 1/2 pint picked shrimps, 1 teaspoon anchovy essence, a few drops of lemon juice and cayenne pepper.

The stock required for the white sauce may be obtained by simmering the shrimp shells in water and milk.

Entree. The success of this dish depends largely on the way the apple is baked. It must never be allowed to get too soft to peel. Choose a large cooking apple and scoop out the centre. Place in the oven and bake lightly. Remove from the oven and peel. Insert in the centre one egg. Season slightly. Sprinkle with parmesan or any finely grated cheese. Place under the griller for a few minutes and serve very hot.

This, by the way, makes a delicious light luncheon dish.

Meat. A delicious squat pie is made in the following way. Use 2 lbs. neck of mutton, 2 lbs. apples (sliced) 1 lb. onions (sliced) 1 tablespoon mushroom ketchup, sugar, salt and pepper.

Divide the neck into cutlets, place them in a pie dish and season with salt and pepper. Add the sliced apples and onions in layers. Sprinkle with sugar and half fill the dish with boiling water. Bake in oven for about 1 1/2 hours.

Before serving strain the gravy.

out of the side of the dish, remove fat, add the mushroom ketchup, season if necessary and return to pie.

Place pie in oven for a few minutes and serve very hot. Sufficient for five or six persons.

Sweet. "Peasant Girl With Veil" is what the Danes call this new way of making apple charlotte. You will need 1 soup plate of grated rye bread, 2 tablespoons of sugar, 1 1/4 lbs. apples, 1 teaspoon of butter, chocolate and whipped cream. Peel and core the apples and stew till reduced to a pulp. Mix the grated rye bread, sugar and butter and cook till set and almost dry. Put a layer of this mixture on a dish, cover with stewed apples, place another layer of the rye bread mixture over this and, finally, sprinkle with grated chocolate. Cover with whipped cream.

Savoury. A favourite Arab dish is a savoury of apples stuffed with chicken. Cut a slice from the top of an apple remove the core, but without piercing the other side of the fruit and carefully scoop out some of the interior. Fill with chopped breast of chicken and a few cloves. Sprinkle with sugar, brown breadcrumbs, moisten with a little fat and bake in the oven.

Mainly about WOMEN

KEEP your gentleness if you want to make the most of modern feminine freedom," counseled Lillian Gish, the actress.

"Undoubtedly women's chief perplexity at the moment is what to do with their new independence in a confused society. I feel certain they will find the way out of their difficulties if they hold fast to the quality of tenderness no matter how hard the going becomes."

"Many women active in economic affairs have been criticised for cultivating a hard, forbidding exterior. This cold outside has been considered by some persons a betrayal of the finest feelings and expressions of women throughout the ages. My opinion is that the hard exterior doesn't go very deep, even when it seems to be impenetrable."

Miss Gish added that she was sorry for the woman who did not have to work, either in the management of her home or in business.

"One of the real tragedies of the times," she said, "is the spectacle of the woman with an over-abundance of money and nothing to do but haunt the bridge tables."

"But on the whole women strike me as being shrewd, and most of them seem to make intelligent use of their leisure, mastering the machinery of the new age rather than being mastered by it."

Mrs. J. A. W. Talbot, joint owner with her daughter of Mid-Day Sun, last year a Derby winner, has died at her home in Stroud, Gloucester. She was the first woman owner to win the Derby.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who at receptions has to shake hands with a very large number of people, has devised a special method. "Grasp firmly the ends of the fingers of the guest," she says, "and never allow him to grasp yours. And when you say, 'How do you do?' I am so glad to see you, draw him gently forward and past you. This slight movement of your own hand to the right discourages a pause for conversation and impels forward not only the guest whose hand you are shaking, but also those following."

Mrs. Roosevelt always "comes up smiling" after a reception, so her method is evidently effective.

From a London correspondent: At the War Office the other day I attended a meeting to discuss what part women could play in the Territorial Army. It is felt that there are many non-combatant duties at present performed by men which could be adequately taken on by women.

Several prominent women took part in the discussion, including Lady Londonderry, representing the Women's Legion, Lady Perrott (V.A.D. Council), and Miss Baxter Ellis (Women's Transport Service). Major-General Sir John Brown, Deputy Director-General of the Territorial Army, presided.

"There are a large number of fields open to women," a War Office official told me, "and if they are given a little publicity and women become interested in them it would help the country a great deal."

"We hope that the W.A.A.C.'s and other women's organisations formed during the last war will form a nucleus of a new women's auxiliary army, offering the experience they gained to the young-of a house. The stereotyped and uninteresting record shows the house placed bang in the centre and around it is so much space occupied by bushes, trees or sky. The better method is either to place the house and horizon on the bottom chord and let a strong sky occupy the top, or to place the house on the top chord and allow the foreground to take up the bottom. The use of either alternative depends on the interest value of the foreground or sky. Briefly these are the two rules for successful pictures. Now see how well you can apply them to this month's contest "Boat Life" and send them into "Lens-Hood".

Sports Chatter

Eric Grumble, an extremely useful tennis player, who played in the League for years, left last week by air for England. His wife, also prominent in local tennis circles, preceded him to England.

A. R. H. Esnail, one of Craignawer Cricket Club's most reliable batsmen, is leaving for England shortly and will not be available for the opening of the coming season.

G. Tait, the Police hockey player, has been confined in Kowloon Hospital for some time suffering from a severe attack of malaria.

Mrs. Gunby, the enthusiastic South Ladies' hockey captain, will be leaving the Colony shortly. I understand that she is proceeding to Vancouver.

K. S. Liew, of Hong Kong University, proceeded to the Straits Settlements last month to visit his parents. He will, however, return to Hong Kong in time for the coming badminton season.

A. R. Pinna, Argonautas' and Recreio hockey player, is now devoting most of his spare time playing golf. He spends most week-ends at Sheungshui.

I understand that C. H. Soon, University badminton player, will be returning to the Colony next month. He is now in Singapore.

Confucian Club beat Silver Star Club last week to win the Senior Ping Pong League Championship.

Ben Foord, South African heavyweight seen above in training at Dorking with a medicine ball, met and was knocked out in the ninth round by Eddie Phillips, of Bow, in a final eliminating contest for the right to meet the champion Tommy Farr. The fight took place at Harringay on June 14. (Copy right, Fox.)

George Hill, who staged a comeback in local soccer last season because of the Club seniors' lack of players, will shortly be leaving the Colony on furlough, and will not be here for the opening of the 1938-39 session. Ernie Strange hopes to be fit enough by then to resume his soccer activities with the Club. He was forced out of the League last season through a knee injury.

Central British School are holding their annual swimming sports next Friday in the European Y.M.C.A. Pool and great rivalry at present exists between Blue and Red Houses. J. Lowe, who is a newcomer to the School, is probably the finest swimmer in the School and should carry off the majority of events. In addition, he is a fairly good diver.

Vitamin D is absolutely necessary to babies, for without it they have weak bones and teeth and may even develop rickets! Vitamin D is frequently scarce even in Mother's milk, but to make sure Allenburys Foods have a definite extra proportion of Vitamin D added. So give your baby Allenburys Food and run no risk of weak bones and bad teeth.
